Be a Good Driver, Always

Most Americans are good drivers—the high traffic toll notwithstanding.

This pat on the back for the average motorist comes from the National Safety Council as it opens its annual appeal for Fourth of July holiday safety.

The Council makes a good point: with upwards of 70 million vehicles whizzing past each other nly a couple of feet apart, the average driver must make 20 to 50 decisions an hour, many of them literally involving life or death. Last year's all-time low death rate of 5.9 fatalities per 100 million miles of travel proves that most drivers made the right decisions.

Most of us want to be good drivers. We pride ourselves on our skill and common sense. We obey the law. We don't want to hurt ourselves, our families, or the stranger in the other car. Then why do we have accidents? Carelessness?

Carelessness is a catch-all word that covers a multitude of sins. Good drivers that we are most of the time, every one who has ever been behind the wheel of a car remembers the nar misses—and our accident toll is made up of those that didn't miss.

We get tired. We burn up at some minor rudeness by another driver. We drive a little too fast. We take a chance in passing. We think a couple of drinks can't do any harm. Or due to any one of a hundred distractions, we let our attention waver from the road for an instant beyond recall.

The National Safety Council

estimates that more than 45 million cars will be on the roads over the three day Fourth of July holiday. So don't be a good driver most of the time. You can't afford to make even one mistake.
