LETTER BOX

To the Editor:

There is a prevailing opinion frequently voiced that in order to safeguard peace one must resort to nuclear deterrents, and that peace among men can be maintained through superiority in the production of the means of war.

Are we not deceiving ourselves when we adopt so-called "expedient" policies of imagined "strength" which bring but fear and distrust to international life?

We would do well to remember in this connection E. B. White's remark that, "the bomb has given us a few years grace without war, and now it offers us a few millenniums of oblivion." It is time that citizens all over the world and particularly those of the nuclear nations should begin to reflect and resolve the dilemma in a moral and humane way.

In 1952, when the controversy on bacteriological warfare was boiling, the Federation of American Scientists denied the charges that BW weapons had been used by the UN forces in Korea, and put the issue squarely as follows:

"The question raised in the world's mind is not so much whether we did use BW in Korea, but whether we are in fact prepared and willing to use it in the future." The question in the case of nuclear warfare is the same.

It is not the question as to who might become guilty of starting a nuclear war? responsibility and guilt for this unimaginable holocaust lies right now and here on the shoulders of everyone and every nation which produces and possesses the bombs and which conducts its policies accordingly.

The bombs and the missiles and the air bases have become the challenge to our conscience and to our sense of mercy.

There is an alternative way, a non-violent policy of reconciliation, of co-operation and mutual aid, it was practiced by men like Gandhi, and in more recent years of Middle East conflict, by Ralph Bunche, and it was incorporated in our Point Four program, not to mention the projects carried out by non-governmental agencies.

It is up to us to take the initiative instead of waiting for others to do better.

Herbert Jehle Lincoln, Nebraska.

'Farmers Should Help Protect Natural Resources'

"Farmers should make every effort to protect the public's interest in the nation's plant, soil and water resources."

Ivan G. Althouse, chairman of the Cass ASC County Committee made that statement in announcing that 1958 Agricultural Conservation funds are still available for cost-sharing to farmers for carrying out approved soil and water conservation practices in Cass County.

Many farms in Cass County have constructed terraces, sod waterways and dams with the aid of the federal government, but we have not reached our goal until every farm's soil and water problems have been solved, he said.

The value of these completed practices on the farms of Cass County have been in evidence after the excessive rainfall of the past four weeks. Most farms that have established terraces, sod waterways and dams show little or no runoff of water after a three to four inch rain.

Most farmers were unable to lime the fields that were seeded to a legume this spring due to the wet weather. It is still possible to treat the spring seeded legume with lime. Althouse stated that all farmers should take advantage of this liming program to improve the soil and legumes for crop rotation. Lime may be applied on the 2 ton basis without a soil test or according to the soil test.

Farmers are urged to take advantage of the cost-sharing funds that are now available to aid in their conservation practices. Requests for cost-sharing must be made before a practice is started.

These requests may be made in the 30-day period prior to the time when the practice is to be started, at the Cass ASC County Office, Weeping Water, Nebr.

GRASSHOPPER COSTS $600 Liberal, Kan. — A grasshopper is a small thing, but sometimes dangerous. This one cost $600.

The insect lit on the face of a 2-year-old child who was in a car beside her mother. The child screamed, the mother swerved the car and it crashed into a parked vehicle.

Damage to the cars totaled $600 and the baby, Dann Lynn Ables, got a cut and bump on her head.

PEAK CLIMB O.D.D Katmandu, Nepal — The Government of Nepal has granted an Argentinian mountaineering expedition permission to climb the 26,795-foot Himalayan peak of Dhaulagiri, the sixth highest mountain in the world and the highest still unclimbed. The attempt will be made in the fall of 1959.
