Seeing Another Universe

This is the time of year, from now through the end of August, when conditions are excellent to view the constellations of Andromeda. The Great Nebula of Andromeda is another complete universe of stars like our own, and in this constellation are stars which are the furthest distance from the earth the unaided eye of man can see.

The night skies from now through the end of August will give a spectacular view of the Milky Way and of Andromeda. To locate it, follow the Big Dipper's pointers through the North Star to the star of Cassiopeia. Then you must bend slightly eastward and you will notice a double line of stars that is Andromeda. The southernmost star in the constellation is called Alpheratz. Alpheratz is located at one corner of a square of rather prominent stars. This square has long been known as the Great Square of Pegasus. A kind of tail of stars, from the opposite corner of the square, gives the impression that the constellation looks something like the Big Dipper.

On a dark, moonless night, you can watch the many stars in this constellation and you will — after a few minutes of careful watch — pick up tiny specks of light which you did not see when you first looked skyward. If and when you find a spot of light, which you cannot focus clearly, even with glasses, you will probably be looking at the Andromeda Nebula. This is a great swirl of stars another universe like the one in which we live. These are called galaxies.

This other universe, and the light you can see coming from it, is so far away that it is estimated that the light you might see of it tonight started from its exact location between seven hundred and fifty thousand and one million years ago.

Down Memory Lane

20 YEARS AGO

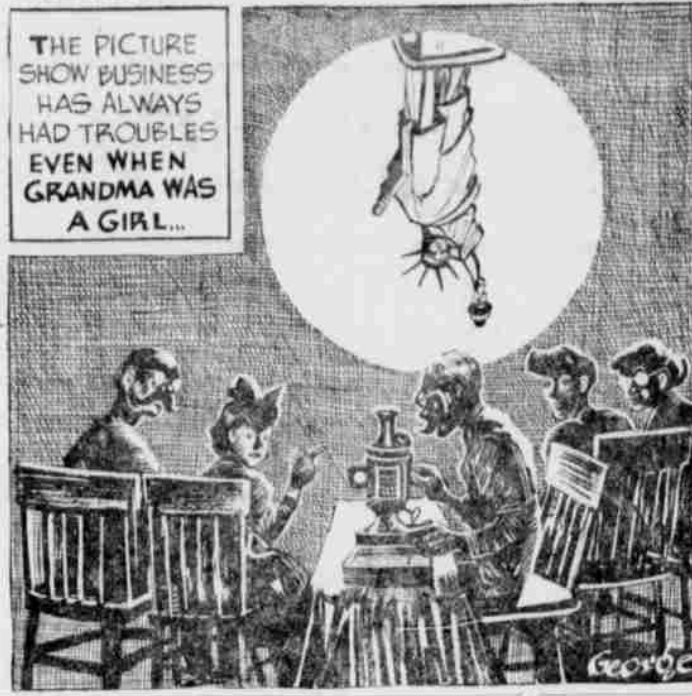

The annual picnic of the Knights of Columbus and Catholic Daughters of America was held at the grove on the Viteznik farm northwest of the city and very largely attended by members and their families. Informal program consisted of baseball games for both men and women, races of all kinds. The picnic dinner was served in different groups — Mrs. Elizabeth Petty, 92, and resident of Plattsmouth for thirty years, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Wynn, after several years of ill health — Two Plattsmouth young men, Chris Bullin and George Thacker, departed for Fort Crook to enter the Citizens Military Training Camp at that place. The training will last for the month of August — Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion of the world announced that he was retiring from the fighting game leaving the title open to all comers — Special train on the Burlington passed through this city carrying Hale Holden, president and E. P. Bracken operating vice president, and a group of minor officials going to inspect the western lines of the railroads and note the damage done by recent washouts and damages caused by the rains — John Edwin Tudy, Plattsmouth merchant for some seventeen years died at Glenwood, Ia., where the family had resided after leaving Plattsmouth — Plattsmouth Chamber of Commerce at their meeting discussed submitting the matter of changing from a council form of city government to a commission form and submitting it to a vote of the people. There was much opposition and the matter died for lack of support.

30 YEARS AGO
 Dr. Charles R. Kennedy, one of the best known surgeons in the west and a former resident of Plattsmouth, died of a heart attack at Pine Crest camp near Nevis, Minn., as he was completing a two weeks vacation in the lake country. He had planned on leaving for his home in Omaha the next day. Mrs. Kennedy and their daughter, Betty Ann were at the camp. He was born in Plattsmouth and graduated from the local school in 1898, later entering the old Omaha medical college, now the University of Nebraska medical college. He soon won recognition for his skill as a surgeon and for ten years was associated with Dr. A. F. Jonas in practice — Miss Jacqueline Reno, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Reno, returned home from the St. Joseph hospital in Omaha where she was taken when a peanut lodged in her bronchial tubes. An emergency operation was performed to remove the peanut — The NYA project to build new community tennis courts was starting. There were fifteen youngmen employed on the job under supervision of Frank Godwin, assisted by Lewis Patton — William, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Brittain, was operated on for appendicitis and was reporting as doing fine.

LETTER BOX

To the Editor:
 As the Elmwood people promised at a meeting of the Cass County Historical Society in Elmwood June 25, we have sent the $25 balance after expense of the luncheon to the society.

This goes as a donation from members of the Cass County Historical Society of Elmwood and members of the Blue Bird Extension Club of which Mrs. G. R. Eveland is chairman.

We had the good help of Mrs. Fred Linhardt who has always been a member and much interested. The dinner was put on with sanction of Mrs. Eveland, Mrs. Linhardt and myself that any fund after expenses be given to the Cass County Historical Society.

We did enjoy having you in Elmwood and hope it brings about a closer working together for the Society. — C. Augusta Robb, Elmwood.
