"Go west young man", said Horace Greely. That is just what Cass County 4-H'ers will do. Only in this case there will be both young men and women. Tuesday August 19 after a day or two of rest following the County Fair eight Cass County 4-H'ers will embark on a weeks trip to Western Nebraska. A 4-H Exchange has been arranged with Cheyenne County.

The boys and girls making the trip are Hunter Ingerson, Donald Harvey, Diana Wiles, Karen Tilson, Herbert Kraeger, Leonard Hill all of Plattsmouth and Barbara Philpot and Marilyn Pollard of Nehawka.

They will live in homes of 4-H'ers while in Cheyenne County. 4-H'ers from Cheyenne County will return a visit to Cass County during the summer of 1959.

2, 4-D can be used safely as a weed control in sorghum fields if applied at the proper time. Fields of milo should not be sprayed when the heads are shedding pollen. If possible to arrange spray schedule, it's also preferable that fields not be sprayed in the early and late "boot stage."

4-H Swine projects are to be judged. The Cass Swine 4-H Swine Committee will tour the 2nd year projects and judge the swine projects for the management practices that the 4-H Club members are employing. Ray Ekerman of Alvo is leader of the B-Square 4-H Club in the Alvo-Greenwood area. The Committee expects to see some fine Duroc pigs on the tour.

Infestations of the Hessian Fly in Nebraska are greater this year than during the past five years, a University of Nebraska insect specialist said today.

Robert E. Roselle, University Extension entomologist, stated that with favorable climatic conditions, there is a 50-50 chance for a serious outbreak of the insect. Under Nebraska condition emergence of the fall generation of flies usually begins late in August, and continues throughout the greater part of September. In general 65 per cent minimum relative humidity & mean temperature of 70 degrees for two weeks are required for emergence of Hessian flies from the flaxseed stage.

Controls recommended are:

—Plant resistant varieties such as Ponca and Pavnee.

—Destroy volunteer and re-growth wheat. If young wheat is not available, the flies die without laying eggs.

—Plant after the fly-safe date.

—Plow infested stubble early to bury the flaxseed.

—Harrowing or disking shortly after the ground is plowed makes this more effective.

Once a squash vine borer eats its way into the stem of the squash, the only way to go after it with a sharp knife or razor found anywhere east of the Rocky Mountains, bores its way into the stem near the base of a runner. The only possible way of saving a runner which has been attacked is to locate the point of injury, then spit one side of the stem with a sharp blade until you puncture the worm. Clarence Schmadeke, County Agent.

Rattlesnakes Are Numerous Near Union

Rattlesnakes are quite numerous in the vicinity of Union where the Heebner Quarries are located. Granville Heebner reports in the News-Press. Since the quarries have been operating four of the dreaded members of the snake family have been killed by the quarry workers.

The site of the quarry is on the B. C. Burden estate about twelve miles north of Nebraska City and just east from Union.

Mr. Heebner reports the first snake killed measured about 45 inches and had eight rattles and was about as thick as a pop bottle. The next two killed were the same size or larger. Many others have been reported.
