Speaking of Shelters

The office of Defense and Civilian Mobilization recently came up with a drawing of a low-cost, temporary bomb shelter. The shelter is designed to give protection to a family from radioactive fallout, though it does not protect them from blast.

The shelter is a practical one, and is suitable for most home establishments. It is simple, and is a minimum protection, but it is worth thinking about—for those who live near areas which might be attacked with nuclear weapons in any new emergency.

One can use sand or earth, of course, to protect himself against radioactive fallout, but there are other materials which might be used such as bricks, concrete blocks, books and papers, water and containers, and lumber.

The O.D.C.M. says that the thicker these materials are, the better. It suggests that the shelter has an L-shaped entrance, with the door protected by sandbags, or the material used in the outer walls. It states that a minimum volume of sixty-five cubic feet per person is needed, that the door should swing inward, that the minimum floor area is ten square feet per person, and that, if you wish, sand or earth-filled bags around a wooden wall is sufficient protection from radioactive fallout.

Thus, the shelter is not too complicated, and most of us will be able to build one—if we want to.

30 YEARS AGO

Farm homes along the King of Trails highway had an unwelcome caller as the home of Mrs. Ida Cole was visited, the owner being in Plattsmouth at the time. The Cole home was ransacked and a great deal of valuable silverware taken as well as a handbag used to haul the loot. The loss was discovered when Mrs. Cole arrived home and she called Deputy Sheriff Rex Young who with Constable Tom Svoboda arrived at the scene and started on the trail of the robber. While the officers were at the Cole home, a call was received from the farm of E. B. Chapman, near Union. As the Chapman family drove up to the house they noticed a light in the kitchen and as the car swung into the driveway Mr. Chapman noticed a car with South Dakota plates, nearby. As Mr. Chapman alighted from the car he saw a man running to the Dakota car and started in pursuit, the man then starting to run toward a grove. The fleeing man was lost in the shadows. The officers visited the Dakota car and a search revealed the stolen silverware from the Cole home and the handbag.
