Home for Aged To Be Built by Presbyterians

Nebraska Presbyterians today made known their intention to do their bit toward solving the problem of care for the aged.

Ray Hansen, Omaha manufacturer who is chairman of the Presbyterian Welfare Foundation, Synod of Nebraska, Incorporated, said that final-stage planning was under way to construct a 48-unit pilot home for the aged.

Although a definite location for the pilot project is yet to be chosen, Hansen said the Welfare Foundation's site selection committee had narrowed prospective land purchase down to "two or three" sites and would take option on a specific location by January 1st, 1959.

Boyer, Biskup and Widstrom, Omaha architects, are making final revisions of plans for the structure, Hansen related.

An effort to raise approximately $300,000 among the state's Presbyterians will be commenced during early 1959 to finance the project, he said.

The pilot home will be the first of what is hoped by the Welfare Foundation to be a series of small homes to be located at points throughout the state.

"The Welfare Foundation's plan is to specialize in small homes placed where they can best serve our senior citizen without taking him too far from his principal place of life residence," Hansen said. "Too, we wish to avoid the institutional atmosphere of some of the larger homes."

Plans for the pilot home include full hobby, craft and educational facilities, the chairman stated, as well as considerations for specialized medical care, convenience for ambulatory patients, and other innovations for aged persons.

Hansen said a public announcement of a site for the pilot home and complete information on administrative plans would be made about January 1st.
