

Plattsmouth Library Receives New Books, Some as Memorials

Ordinarily, the acquisition of a single new book for the library is of no signal importance as a news item. But one arrived recently of such unique character as to be essentially newsworthy in the field of education.

It is the TRUE story of the Old West, pictorially told, with just enough text to be instructive. The book is really an album of pictures and is entitled Pageant of the Pioneers by Clarence S. Jackson.

It is a collection of more than 100 reproductions in color and black and white of works of William H. Jackson. "Picture Maker of the Old West."

Jackson (1843-1942) was a recording artist who portrayed with accuracy and detail scenes and events of pioneer days in the west as he knew and lived them, and without over-dramatizing the subjects he painted.

He brings to mind the all-over scene showing the great mass movement of men, animals and material into the vast western wilderness. Therefore, his artistic portrayals of early western life may be relied upon as authentic and of immense value to students in research work.

Pageant of the Pioneers was privately published by Harold Warp, founder and proprietor of Pioneer Village in Minden, Neb.

Warp donated 10,000 copies to the libraries of the United States as a contribution to education.

Other additions to the library here recently include:

"How to Live 365 Days a Year" by John A. Schindler, M. D., a memorial gift in memory of the late Hill Wescott, presented by Mr. and Mrs. Searle Davis.

Also given in Mr. Wescott's memory are—

Cripple Creek Days by M. B. Lee. This book is a reminiscence of the last gold rush towns, given by the Fontenelle Chapter of the DAR.

Alfred Adler by Phyllis Bottome, a portrait of a good and great man, given by the T. I. Friest family.

And, Lands of the Bible by Terrien, given by the Library Board and librarian.

St. Paul's Circle Three Circle Three of St. Paul's E and R Church met at the church for one o'clock luncheon.

Hostesses were Helen Horn, Mrs. Anna Meisinger and Mrs. Alvin Meisinger, assisted by Katie Meisinger.

Mrs. P. A. Meisinger gave the devotional. Mrs. Lizzie Stoehr won the door prize.
