ARTIST'S DRAWING OF POSSIBLE FOOD IRRADIATION FACILITY AT CPPD'S NUCLEAR PLANT — This artist's drawing depicts what the future may hold in the way of a food irradiation center at Consumers Public Power District's sodium graphite-type nuclear power plant near Hallam, Nebraska. The design modification of CPPD's nuclear reactor building for the proposed irradiation facility, presented to the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission by Atomics International, a division of North American Aviation, Inc., most likely will be erected adjacent to CPPD's nuclear reactor power plant which is built on a 640-acre site about a mile north of Hallam. This cutaway drawing shows the floor of the irradiation building with operators standing near the grain hopper (upper right), while meat and packaged food move past radioactive slabs on conveyors in the underground section. Radioactive sodium, carried to the slabs by piping, supplies the source material for irradiating the food.

Food Irradiation Planned For CPPD Nuclear Project

COLUMBUS, Neb. — Consumers Public Power District officials revealed Sunday that design plans have been proposed for the possible construction of a food irradiation center adjacent to CPPD's sodium graphite-type nuclear power facility near Hallam.

Gen. Mgr. R. L. Schacht and Dr. Emerson Jones, CPPD's nuclear physicist, announced that a design modification within the Hallam reactor building has been approved by the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission. The modification would provide for the flow of radioactive sodium to a proposed food irradiation center planned and presented by Atomics International.
