Pan American Highway

For many years American tourists have dreamed of driving from the United States down to Panama, or even further south. There has been widespread Pan American Highway.

Not long ago, however, two American Automobile Association experts reported that the drive, even as far as Panama, was not recommended, and that it was not worth the hardships, expense and annoyances. The two experts were well acquainted with the route, for they had begun a journey in February, southward to Panama, having arrived after many grim battles.

Even before leaving Mexico, it seems, the tourist who would drive south along the Pan American Highway (which was to have been opened this year, incidentally) must cross a number of streams where there are no bridges.

Then, into Guatemala, and on down El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rico, etc., various other difficulties are encountered. Some of the new highways are even deteriorating rapidly. The climax comes when one gets within 134 miles of the Panamanian border, where the road suddenly stops.

This road was supposed to have been built in time for the opening of the Highway this year, but thirty-nine bridges are still to be built, and it is not open. Thus, we are sorry to say, the Pan American Highway is still a farce. And it is a poor commentary on the foresight, planning, and efficiency of our Central American neighbors to the south.

30 YEARS AGO

Officers Dave Pickrel and Joe Hadraba were called to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lugsch on Pearl Street where a burglar was reported as ransacking the house. They had retired to their room about 12:30 and shortly after Mrs. Lugsch aroused her husband by stating that someone was prowling around the lower part of the house and Mr. Lugsch coming to the head of the stairs on the upper floor saw the man going from room to room with a flashlight. Mr. Lugsch called to George Hild, a neighbor on the east from an upper floor window to call the police. When the police arrive the burglar had disappeared. Nothing of value was reported as missing.
