Hog Prices The usual summer price rise for hogs failed to develop this year because of earlier farrowcrop in 1960 have been outlined ings and marketings, a heat wave in June, and increased imports from Canada, according to University of Nebraska agricultural economist. The next 18 months do not look very bright for hog producers unless 1960 production plans are curtailed, they report. The feed supply and hog cycle situations indicate the next year will be the low price period. — Clarence Schmadeke, County Agent.
