Back to School!
America's future depends largely on today's youngsters—and on the education they receive at the primary and high school levels. That's why back to school is such an important phrase—for Johnny and Susie, their parents, their country, and the whole free world as well.
So as Johnny and Susie return to school, they go with the best wishes of every thinking American—including the men and women of the Burlington. They go, too, with financial assistance from this Railroad. We pay substantial taxes—much of which are invested in education. May this investment produce solid returns in the years to come!
P.S.—Good luck, kids!
