X-15 Pilot Interviewed At SAC HQ.

HQ. SAC — Less than a week after plotting the X-15 on its first powered flight, North American Test Pilot Scott Crossfield paid a visit to SAC Headquarters.

At a press conference which preceded his tour of the underground command post, Crossfield dispelled a cloud of inaccuracies and misconceptions regarding his work with the experimental aircraft which will take man to the edge of space. Some lesser known facts revealed:

Only 25 percent of the X-15's capabilities will be realized in the current testing program before it is delivered to the Air Force.

So structurally rugged and safe is the X-15 that Crossfield estimates that 98 per cent of predictable accidents have been eliminated.

In Crossfield's opinion the X-15 is fully as safe as any other high performance aircraft, due to closely controlled operating conditions.

It is not Crossfield's mission on that of North American Aviation to "wing out" the X-15 for maximum performance. Their job is to test the X-15 and see that it meets the minimum specifications laid down by NASA and USAF.

There are three X-15s being used in the testing program.

evening were Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Anderson and Jeffrey, Miss Imogene Gude of Nebraska City and Bill Ross.

Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Sumner, Elmwood, were guests Sunday afternoon of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Pollard and they with Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hardaway of Elmwood had lunch with Mr. and Mrs. M. E. McDonald.

Mr. and Mrs. Kent Balfour, Beverly and Neil were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hauberg and family of Osceola.

The first X-15 will probably be delivered to USAF this fall.

Crossfield has been up to a simulated altitude of 210,000 feet in a pressurized flying suit, which is as far as any altitude chamber can take a man.

Crossfield was queried intensively on his personal reactions to flights in the X-15. His observations, given matter of factly, reflected great confidence in the aircraft and the thoroughness and competence of all the technicians working with him.

Asked how his wife felt about this test-flying the X-15, Crossfield grinned broadly. "You'll laugh when I say this," he replied, "but the truth is, I have never asked her."

Moon Has Lots Of Seas, Lakes But No Water

The poet who first rhymed moon with June, spoon and crown could have been the same man who named the bumps and holes on earth's natural satellite.

The first rocket ship to the moon may well land in the Sea of Tranquility, for example. If it misses that mark, it could land in the Sea of Crises.

From that point, a spaceman could walk north to investigate the Sea of Fertility and the Sea of Nectar, hopping across a mountain range and the Catharina crater, he would come to the Sea of Clouds just west of the Sea of Moisture. He might want to bypass the Ocean of Storms and stroll south between Copernicus and Kepler—both craters named for scientists—to the Bay of Dew.

On his way back to the spaceship, he might look over the Lake of the Sleepers and the Lake of the Dead.

Of course, these names—translated into English from Latin—might confuse a spaceman with no poetry in his soul. According to World Book Encyclopedia, there is no water on the moon—and the "seas" and "oceans" are just dry plains.
