AF Has Holiday Release Policy

HQ. SAC — Air Force has announced an early release policy for the forthcoming holiday period.

Essentially, officers and airmen due for separation during the period Dec. 18, 1959-Jan. 4, 1960, will be separated during the period Dec. 10-13, provided they request early separation and there are no military considerations to the contrary.

Those whose separation or retirement is directed individually by Headquarters USAF, or effected by Department of the Air Force special orders.

Reservists undergoing six months active duty for training under Reserve Forces Act of 1955.

Aliens seeking to qualify for citizenship by completion of three years active military service.

Eligible personnel returning from overseas after Dec 10 who will not have time to process before Dec. 18 may be reassigned to the base nearest their home and take a 10-day "delay en route" before reporting for separation. They must, however, have the accrued time, want the leave and not be discharged after their normal separation date.

Reenlistment eligibility for AFM 39-9. In most cases, the early-out airmen will be essentially the same as for a normal expiration of term of service, based on criteria established in AFM 39-9. In most cases, the airmen will be ineligible to enlist or reenlist in the USAF for 91 days.

Air Force also outlined the after-discharge status of regular airmen who have, or don't have, UMT or military service obligations, and Reserve and Air National Guard airmen.

Mallards Moving Into Nebraska

LINCOLN — Duck hunting prospects are picking up, reports the Nebraska Game Commission. Ducks are numerous in the Sand Hills and some lakes are well covered with waterfowl.

Coupled with the news of fresh duck arrivals comes the comment that hunting pressure is low, especially in the Ogallala duck arrivals comes the comment that hunting pressure is low, particularly in the Ogallala region. About 3,000 mallards have moved into the area. Those gunners hunting usually get their three. Some have also reported limits of Canada geese harvested from a flock in advance of normal Canada flights.

Mallards are building up at Johnson Reservoir, and about 7,000 waterfowl were observed during one count at Sutherland Reservoir. An estimated 15,000 waterfowl crowded Enders Lake during the first part of the hunting season.

A large number of diving ducks are passing through the state. These include three species -- redheads, canvasbacks, and ruddy ducks -- which are presently short in number. The total bag and possession limit of any hunter may include only one canvasback, or one red head, or one ruddy duck. The three species are difficult to distinguish, and hunters are advised to be sure of what they're shooting.

Wheat Up, Feed Grains Down Fat Cattle Steady, Hogs Down

LINCOLN—A roundup of the price outlook shows wheat prices up, feed grains lower, cattle steady and hogs nearing the low point.

That's how Everett E. Peterson, Extension farm economist at the University of Nebraska, sums it up as November begins.

"The wheat supply for the current marketing year, which began on July 1, was a record 2.4 billion bushels. This is enough wheat (disregarding class and grade) to provide for nearly four years of domestic use. With exports of 400 million bushels a year, we have enough wheat now for over two years of both domestic and export needs," the economist points out.

"The carryover of hard red winter wheat of 932 million bushels was 73 per cent of total wheat stocks. This will go up an estimated 1,067 million bushels at the end of this marketing year. Market prices have risen close to the loan rate and above last year at this time. Further gains will be limited by the supply situation. Prices should rise slightly until after Jan. 1, when deferred income sales are made."

"Rains this fall in the central and southern plains have improved next year's winter wheat crop prospects. Only the weather can prevent another increase in government holdings of wheat in the 1960-61 marketing year."

"Prices of all feed grains will decline next month in sympathy with corn. The harvest of the record corn crop of 4.4 billion bushels will depress corn prices below loan rates for several weeks. This is the time to buy corn for feeding; saving on price should more than offset storage and interest costs. Prices will rise seasonally from December to spring," Peterson believes.

He suggests keeping in mind the fact that, "on a loan basis, corn is over priced relative to grain sorghum and other feed grains. The price support on corn is nearly 2 cents a pound, on grain sorghum about 1.5 cents a pound. The feeding value of grain sorghum is 90-95 per cent of that of corn. With plenty of storage, it may pay to seal home grown corn and buy grain sorghum to feed."

Peterson notes considerable pessimism over the outlook for cattle price in both feeding and ranching areas, probably more pessimism than the current situation justifies. The fat cattle market has been on the weak side lately. The prolonged steel strike has temporarily reduced demand for beef at a time when pork and poultry marketings are heavy.
