Flabby Youngsters?

More and more attention is being called to the fact that boys and girls in this country today are showing the effects of a lack of exercise. The increasing number of automobiles and luxury living in our country is to blame.

Moreover, our cities are growing larger, with more people living in metropolitan areas. It is a traditional fact that city living does not build the strongest body. It often includes too much soft-seat television viewing and automobile sitting.

If your child thinks he must be driven to and from school every day, or considers it unthinkable to walk to social functions or other events, perhaps you are neglecting his or her physical conditioning. There are health experts today who believe that children should not be hauled to school by bus since they miss one of the major sources of exercise they would otherwise have.

Parents should see to it that they are not rearing flabby-muscled Americans, who will not be able to stand up to the demands of an emergency, or military service, or severe adversity in time of crisis, when the country most needs these qualities in its citizens.

State Legislators Studying Governmental Problems

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association LINCOLN — Nebraska's 43 senators are currently engaged in quiet study of some major areas of government.

Between sessions every two years of the Unicameral, the lawmakers form into committees and study state government. These normally are serious research groups who do not seek headlines.

Effect of recommendations of the committees, that go under the name of the Legislative Council, is very strong on the following session of the Legislature.

In recent years, importance of council recommendations has increased annually.

Current chairman of the council is Sen. Don Thompson of McCook.

There are 15 studies being conducted now and Thompson said every committee has met already. Progress is ahead of other years, the chairman added.

Thompson has pushed the committees to get an early start on the theory that the studies, and recommendations, will be better.

A high percentage of the suggestions of the last study committees became law during the 1959 session.

Thompson said this is because "good legislation is the result of intelligent compromise where possible" and the council committees are able to iron out rough spots in a state problem before it gets to the floor of the Legislature.

In February, the council executive committee will meet to talk about controversy in the highway department.

Thompson said since there has been some controversy about the department, "it is our duty to give it some consideration."

Trailer Talk
The office of Atty. Gen. C. S. Beck has ruled that once a house trailer, always a house trailer.

This, Beck said, is despite the fact a trailer may be mounted on blocks, have a lean-to addition and be hooked up to city sewer and water lines.

Kimball County Attorney Thomas D. Brower asked a question of Beck on taxing of the trailers.

Beck said it appears the manner in which the trailer is used is not a controlling factor when it comes to paying taxes.

Concluded the attorney general: "If it is designed for living quarters and if it is also designed for being drawn by a motor vehicle, it is governed by the act (on taxing of trailers)."

A law passed by the last legislature called for licensing of house trailers much in the same manner of automobiles. Property taxes must be paid before a permit is issued for the trailer.

Hospital Money
There is still a strong demand in Nebraska for federal hospital funds.

That's the report from Verne Pangborn, director of the hospital division of the State Health Department.

Pangborn says Nebraska could put to use more than $7 million in 1960 in federal matching funds for hospital construction. However, he says, no such allocation is anticipated.

Nebraska's allotment for the current fiscal year is $1.9 million.

Taxing Rules
New rules for assessors to follow in taxing property this year have been put into effect by State Commissioner Forrest Johnson.

Major change from past rules is that Johnson has given the force of law to the assessment guide adopted by county assessors. The guide sets a uniform state-wide value for such items as livestock, household goods and farm equipment.

In the past assessors have used this as a guide, deviating in counties where special problems occurred.

However, now, language of Johnson's rules indicates the guide must be followed and any changes from it must be justified. To avoid any legal entanglements, there is a paragraph in the rules stating that they do not intend to take away from the county assessors their right, granted by law, to determine taxable value of property.

Assessors also have been given authority to subpoena books and records of taxpayers who refuse to let the assessors look at them.

Congressman
GLENN CUNNINGHAM

By Rep. Glenn Cunningham
Washington, D. C. (Special)—The second session of this 86th Congress started at a crawl last week. But the pressure of the Presidential nominating conventions in July is expected to cause a more rapid pace of legislative work than the last few years. Let us hope so.

What kind of session will this be? The Washington Star said editorially the attention of this Congress is "almost sure to be divided between making laws and making issues. It should be a conversationally lively session."

Columnist Constantine Brown stated, "Senators and Representatives who have returned to Washington for another legislative year express serious doubts that the second session of the 86th Congress will do much constructive work. We will have oratory galore and demagoguery at its best."

NBC-TV Washington commentator Bryson Rasch said this session will be "one of the most fascinating displays of political maneuvering this country has ever seen."

The stage is set for politics as usual. No issue will be approached this year strictly on its merits. And issues range from Fair Trade to Trade Fair bills. Looming over Capital Hill is the shadow of the nominating conventions. The public will indeed be treated (or mistreated) to a session-long political scrap.

But we still have the best legislative system in the world.

As we start this new session, I am pleased to be able to report to you that official voting records for the 1959 session show that I was present for every roll call vote.

My 100 per cent voting record compares to the average of 89.5 per cent. At the other end of the scale was Rep. Canfield of New Jersey with 29 per cent, Buckley of New York with 48 per cent and six more Congressmen who were present for less than 60 per cent of the votes last year.
