Memorial Day

Navy Mothers Club.
Color guards and color bearers of the Legion and VFW organizations took part.
The firing squad was from Company H of the 355th Army Reserves Infantry Regiment, John J. Clويد Jr., officer in charge.
Taps was played by Keener Price and Roger Beverage of the band.
Commanders Boyd Linder of the Legion and Jack Barnard of the VFW raised the colors.
Hundreds of families decorated graves of veterans and non-veterans Monday. It was a beautiful sunny day.
Graves of veterans were also decorated with poppy adorned crosses prepared by the Legion Auxiliary.

Paris owes a debt to the obscure, microscopic animals of the order Foraminifera. Stone was taken from a near-by bed of limestone laid down hundreds of millions of years ago by shells of the one-celled creatures.
Army helicopter pilots help out as cowboys during the annual round up of buffaloes on the Wichita Mountains Wildlife Refuge. The bison, which now number nearly 1,000, must be regularly corralled for branding and vaccination. The helicopters are used to locate strays and drive them in.

Swarming Enables Honeybees To Establish New Colonies

Washington — In late spring or summer, the hardworking honeybee goes on its one and only spree.
Spurred by a mysterious impulse, the senior members of a bee colony and their queen break bonds with home and security for an impetuous journey in to the unknown. They boil from the hive in a wildly excited, dancing, singing cloud that spins into the sky.
The migration, or swarm, takes weeks of preparation, and it is nature's way of perpetuating a bee family through colonization, the National Geographic Society says.
Queen Faces Rivals
The swarm normally occurs when the aging queen wearies of her sole job, the laying of about 1,500 eggs a day. Through instinct, the workers feel a vague dissatisfaction. The queen herself may sense the imminence of young, vigorous rivals. The hive is probably becoming crowded with the queen's eggs.
In preparation for the exodus, worker bees first construct immaculate wax cells for a new generation of drones. In each the old queen lays one egg that will progress from larva to pupa to an adult male bee in 24 days. One of these drones will mate with the new queen.
The eggs of potential queens hatch faster, so the workers wait more than two weeks before building the large, peanut-shaped queen cells
