Duck Prospects Reported 'Up'

LINCOLN — The brightening duck picture is heightened by the news of a 44 per cent increase in Sand Hills breeding ducks over last year. Game Commission Director M. O. Steen said surveys in the Sand Hills indicate that breeding ducks are up 44 per cent over 1959, and 14 per cent over the 1955-1959 average.

Earlier counts in the rain-water basin in the south-central part of the state showed one of the best nesting populations in recent years, with a minimum 38,000 breeding ducks inhabiting the 3,700-square-mile area. The 1960 index for the Sand Hills indicates 143,650 breeding ducks. Last year's index was 99,770.

Spring and early summer rains have increased water in the eastern portion to near record amounts, more than in many years.

Water conditions in the central Sand Hills are good, similar to last years. The western portion is only fair with somewhat drier conditions than in 1959.

Water in the rain-water basin is in good supply.

Game Seasons

LINCOLN — Nebraskans will have to wait only a few weeks to learn this fall's hunting bags and seasons.

The Game Commissioners will set the seasons for pheasant, quail, grouse, and squirrels at their next meeting scheduled for Friday, Aug. 19.

Opening dates are standard, however, allowing sportsmen to plan their hunting trips well in advance. Opening day for quail and pheasants is the fourth Saturday in October (October 22). Prairie chicken and sharp-tailed grouse hunting begins the second Saturday in October (October 8). Squirrel standard opening date is the second Saturday in September (September 10).

Waterfowl seasons and bags will be set within the limits prescribed by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Pheasants have not suffered unduly from the severe winter, and Game Commissions surveys of bobwhite quail indicate that, if conditions continue good, hunting this fall will be better than average.
