World War I Pension Question 'Sure To Come Up in Congress'

By Melvin Paul
 Statehouse Correspondent
 The Nebraska Press Association
 LINCOLN — The problem of a pension for World War I veterans will continue to come up in Congress.

That's the believe of Louis R. Eby, Director of Veterans Affairs for Nebraska.

He says he thinks the pressure on Congress by World War I veterans and other quarters to provide an adequate pension for all who served in the Great War will produce one in the next session of the lawmaking body.

The director feels such a pension will be based on age and income.

A pension bill has been passed by Congress but Eby said it benefits the young veterans and widows and children at the expense of the older, or World War I veterans.

This is because of income levels of the pension, Eby says, which counts social security as income for the older veterans, thus reducing to a low figure the number who can qualify.

Young veterans do not qualify for much social security if they were unable to work and thus could get as high as $100 per month from the government under the new pension, he added.

Therefore, he says he feels a separate pension bill affecting only World War I veterans will come about, probably in the next meeting of the lawmakers.

Thirty-eight states have given bonus payments to veterans of the first war and some to World War II servicemen. But, in Nebraska a Veterans Aid Fund was established with income going to needy veterans and their families as an outright gift.

Nebraska has about 24,000 veterans of World War I.

They are starting to hustle a little bit faster in the Capitol City.

"They" are the employees of the State Fair Board, headed by Secretary Ed Schultz.

Sept. 3-9 are the dates for the annual agricultural exposition and although work goes on year around it begins stepping up in July and August as the grounds are made ready.

Schultz announced that premium money offered at the Fair will be a record total this year — $83,176. This compares with $82,093 in 1959.

The cash premiums, the secretary said, will be in addition to the ribbons, plaques and trophies offered by the Fair Board and various merchandise and scholarship awards presented by business firms and civic organizations.

Exhibitors of livestock will get the biggest share of the cash premiums.

The Fair Board has 29 members selected from five districts for two year terms.

Presidents or elected delegates societies are ex-officio members and are entitled to attend the annual meeting but they have no vote unless the society held a fair the preceding year and filed a report according to law.

The State Board of Agriculture, as the Fair Board is designated in law books, is required to publish an annual report in addition to its prime function of managing the state fair.

The state owns 250 acres of land on which the fair is held and activities of the department, an agency of state government, are paid for out of fair revenue and legislative appropriations.

A territorial Board of Agriculture was authorized in 1853 and the first exposition was held at Nebraska City, Sept. 21-23, 1859. It was not a financial success and enthusiasm of the board diminished.

Two other fairs were held in Nebraska City in 1868 and 1869. It was not until Feb. 25, 1879, that a law passed prescribing duties of the Board of Agriculture and providing for a State Fair.

Tax Cut Likely
 State Tax Commissioner Forrest Johnson indicates it is possible to cut the state property tax about 10 cents for every $1,000 worth of property owned by a Nebraskan.

Johnson said this is because of an increase in the worth of property reported this year in the counties for taxation.

The state levy is used, along with miscellaneous receipts, to operate state government. Currently, Nebraskans pay $8.45 for every $1,000 assessed value of property they own to operate state government. This

A study conducted by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station shows that the monthly cost of beef production is $99 per mother cow. This figure includes interest on investment, operator's labor, depreciation and other annual costs.

In addition to the local levies, such as for school districts and county and city governments.

The state levy is set by the Board of Equalization which is expected to meet before Aug. 1 to determine how much Nebraskans will pay for state government in 1960.

Handicapped
 There are many handicapped children attending regular school systems in Nebraska who need special aid.

That's the word from Galen Dodge, state director of the special education division of the State Education Department.

To try to remedy the situation, the department will ask the 1961 Legislature to appropriate more money to get the children enrolled in special courses.

In the past the Legislature has not paid the amount of funds it said it would, Dodge commented, toward the cost of educating the handicapped youngsters. As a result, he added, many schools have dropped such programs. Currently, 119 schools in 81 school districts have special programs for the youngsters.

Cub Scouts at WW Have Picnic

WEeping WATER (Special) — The Cub Scouts met on Sunday afternoon at the school grounds for an afternoon of games and a scavenger hunt. About 65 gathered for a picnic supper at the school grounds. James Doyle and Sigvald Jensen were in charge of games.

After supper and watermelon, a meeting was held. The Cubs will have a float at the Fair. The following awards were presented: Lion badge, Bert Marshall; Bear badge, Tommy Kunz; silver arrow, Gayle Rector; gold and silver arrow, David Horn; James Schlosser was presented his Webelos badge. He had been in scouts for a year. Terry Doyle was also presented a Webelos badge and was given a scout knife as he has been in scouts three years. Gene Moore, Donald Elliott and Wyman Mather, Boy Scouts, welcomed Terry into the scouts with the scout hand-clasp.

Both boys are eligible to enter Boy Scouts. Danny Cowperwith was guest at the meeting and will be in Cubs for one year.
