Herd of Longhorns Roams Fort Niobrara Game Refuge

"Shades of the Texas Trail, Chester, it's a longhorn!" You're right, pardner, it's a whole herd of the critters. They're roaming the 20,000-acre range of the Fort Niobrara National Wildlife Refuge.

The refuge, operated by the Fish and Wildlife Service, is five miles northeast of Valentine on State Highway No. 12.

Along with the honest-injun longhorns, herds of shaggy buffalo, and magnificent elk graze the rolling grasslands along the Niobrara River. The longhorns make up the second largest government herd in the United States.

Refuge visitors can always be sure of seeing any of these prized species that once graced the Nebraska range. Main-herd buffalo are prone to sticking their tails in the air and galloping over the plains at the sight of strangers. But several buffalo, longhorns, and elk are kept near the main refuge buildings for easy viewing.

Refuge Manager Howard Woon says that the herds are thinned annually to the size that can be supported by the acreage of grazing land. Surplus animals are either sold or butchered. Arthur Godfrey is among those who have purchased young buffalo from the refuge to start private herds.

Farmers Urged To Continue Spraying for Corn Rootworms

LINCOLN — Farmers in areas of south central Nebraska where corn rootworm beetles are present in large numbers should continue control practices of spraying DDT.

This recommendation comes from Robert E. Roselle, Extension entomologist at the University of Nebraska, who says that conditions this season make it advisable to control adult beetles.

The black and yellow striped beetles, about 1/4 inch long, feed on corn leaves after emergence, then on pollen and silks after the corn tassels.

Two benefits can be expected from applying controls now, Roselle stated.

1. Reduction of larvae next spring.

2. More effective pollination by reduction of damage to silks.

Since rootworm beetles are active until late fall, depositing eggs over a long period, larvae can be reduced greatly by controlling the beetles during the next week, Roselle explained. While perhaps the greatest reduction of larvae next spring can be achieved by spraying immediately, egg-laying can be reduced significantly by spring on into August and early September, he emphasized.

Research conducted by University of Nebraska entomologists in 1946-47 revealed good results through spraying after August 15 to control adults corn rootworm beetles.

DDT is the only material recommended for control of beetles at this time. Two to three quarts of 25 per cent DDT emulsifiable concentrate in two gallons of water per acre, applied by air, is quite effective, Roselle said. DDT granules are not considered effective, he added.

Soil treatment to control the corn rootworm larvae has been considered the most effective and least expensive method of control until this year, Roselle noted.

"However, during the past two years, failures of all materials previously recommended for application in the soil have failed in certain areas of south-central Nebraska. All types of applications of such materials as BHC, aldrin and heptachlor are involved in the failures.

"These materials have been successful for 12 years and have saved millions of dollars. Many farmers have experienced satisfactory control with recommended materials this year," the University insect specialist pointed out.

"Please Don't Eat the Daisies" at Cass Theatre

"Please Don't Eat the Daisies," one of the nation's top best-sellers, with an estimated reading audience of 51,850,000, has been brought to the screen by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with a cast headed by Doris Day and David Niven, and co-starring Janis Paige, Spring Byington and Richard Haydn.

Both the hilarity and warmth of Jean Kerr's book, dealing with the humor stemming from daily problems familiar to every American family, have been happily captured in the screen version, filmed in CinemaScope and color under the direction of Charles Walters. He is the director of such previous MGM hits as "Ask Any Girl," "Don't Go Near the Water" and "High Society."

"Please Don't Eat the Daisies" coming Sun., Mon., Tues., Aug. 21-22-23 to Cass Theatre of Plattsmouth, tells the story of happily married Kate and Larry Macay (Miss Day and Niven) and their four irrepressible sons, ranging from a nine-year-old (Charles Herbert) to seven-year-old twin (Stanley Livingston and Flip Mark) to a one-and-a-half year-old (Baby Gellert).

"These trails would shake the cab off an ordinary truck...but not our Chevy"

Few trucks are subjected to the body-wracking beatings that are part of a day's work for this Chevrolet Series 60 pulpwood hauler. It's owned by J. E. Fox, North Carolina logging contractor. As Bobby Fox, a partner in the business says, "Loaded with pulpwood, we drive over stumps and potholes you'd think would tear the truck to pieces. These trails would shake the cab off an ordinary truck, but not our Chevy. We can average an extra load a day... make $45 to $50 a day more with this Chevy than we can with the others."

In every weight class these Chevies are doing more work at less expense than trucks have ever done before. Drive one at your Chevrolet dealer's. It's an experience that could pay you big dividends.

"That 6-cylinder engine really performs," says Bobby Fox. "It's got the lugging power we need in the woods and walks right along with a full load on the highway."
