VALUE OF WHEAT CROP IN NEBRASKA

Cass County Wheat Crop $1.7 Million Annually

LINCOLN—The average value of the Nebraska wheat crop in the five years, 1954-58, was more than $105 per capita annually, making wheat vitally important to the economic well-being of the state, the Nebraska Wheat Commission said this week.

The figures were announced this week by Robert Florell, Chief of the Commission. Florell said the value of the annual wheat crop was $153,394,000. He said the per capita value was figured on the basis of a Nebraska population of 1,450,000. The 1954-58 five-year figures available.

Cass County's 1954-58 average annually was $1,723,010 in wheat. Florell said that 15 Nebraska counties raised more than $3,000,000 worth of wheat each year, and 49 of the state's 93 counties raised more than a million dollars worth of wheat annually.

Cheyenne county led the state in per capita wheat value, with an annual average of $10,670.92. Perkins county was second with $7,740.748; Box Butte county third with $5,494.634; Kimball county was fourth with $5,435,706; Deuel county fifth with $4,471,760; Keith county sixth with $4,022,270.

Adams, Lancaster, Banner, Chase and Gage counties all averaged more than $3,700,000 annually, the report showed. "This report points up the fact that while wheat is a major crop in several western Nebraska counties, it is also a very significant crop economically for many southern and eastern Nebraska counties," Florell said. "All Nebraskans can be proud of the great wheat growing industry that has been developed in our state. Wheat is one of our great resources. This report re-emphasizes the vital importance of keeping our wheat growing economy healthy."
