Breakfast For Health

By State of Nebraska, Department of Health

Is breakfast a neglected meal at your house?

The importance of giving breakfast its rightful place with the other two meals of the day has become a matter of education. Studies indicate that physical well-being is definitely harmed by skipping or skipping breakfast. Nutritionists say breakfast is the most important meal of the day, for two reasons.

You need food after hours of fasting and there is a day's work to be done and it takes solid food to get it done efficiently. Tests made by scientists show more mental and physical alertness, speed, and endurance after a good breakfast.

The morning meal should constitute 1/3 to 1/4 the daily food requirement of vitamins, minerals, fats, carbohydrates, and proteins. Just what one eats is not important, but a widely recommended basic breakfast is:

fruit, cereal, milk bread and butter.

If you are short on time in the morning, plan ahead and be organized so that you won't have to spend much time fixing your meal. Some preparation the evening before, and a ten minute earlier rising can make a big difference in the morning.

For those who are dieting — you won't lose weight by omitting breakfast. On the other hand, if you eat a nourishing breakfast you will be able to stick with a reducing regime more successfully.

Breakfasts are the most economical meal of the day. They give more nutrients for less money than either luncheon or dinner. A good morning meal makes you feel wonderful and it tastes so good.

You owe it to yourself to eat a good breakfast.

Senator Everett Dirksen (R-Ill.), upon being asked his opinion of the legislative device known as "tabling."

"When I use it, it's a good device; when someone else uses it, I have to re-examine it on its merits."
