Wash and Wear Rayons

Wash and Wear Rayons

Something to look forward to in the fabric department will be a wash and wear rayon. The rayon fabrics will be produced and marketed under the "Everglaze" and "Ban Care" trademarks. The new process makes possible the production of no-iron rayon fabrics and garments with wash and wear qualities. Now rayon garments can be washed and dried by any normal method, at home or in a commercial laundry, and emerge soft, smooth, fresh, completely wrinkle free and ready for wear. This process puts an end to the limp, shapeless, mussy look normally associated with rayons after laundering. Independent laboratory tests show that wash and wear properties are consistently maintained after as many as fifty commercial launderings.

Since the process is non-resinous, there are no problems with damage or discoloration from chlorine and garments have a durable resistance to perspiration, mildew, and bacterial damage. These rayons have an almost complete lack of linting. This latter finish is especially important for uniforms, worn in hospitals and laboratories where an accumulation of lint creates health and safety hazards.

Production of these new rayons is now underway at the Bancroft plant, so it should appear in the stores before long — Martha West, County Extension Home Agent.
