

Rocking of Road Is Topic again

Some of the strongest language ever heard in the Cass County Commission rooms in the Courthouse here was hurled at District One Commissioner W. F. Nolte Tuesday during the Commission's regular meeting.

Taking Nolte to task for what he labeled "gossip" about circumstances surrounding rocking of a road in the area about halfway between here and Louisville was Maurice Decabooter.

Decabooter said Nolte had unfairly criticized him in statements published in a newspaper (not this one) and had "spread" a statement about his (Decabooter's) private business.

Nolte replied that he had taken issue with the rocking of the road to a place Decabooter formerly owned and where he fed cattle because of "irregular procedure" in applying the rock. The incident had been the subject for a delegation's inquiry of the Commission previously.

Nolte said he had repeated a statement about Decabooter but that he had had the information direct from the person concerned in a business matter. Decabooter said the statement was not true and later said the person Nolte mentioned had denied it.

The rocking in question was done last year, the cattle feeder said in a legitimate way. He had wanted his drive rocked and asked County Highway Superintendent Fred Clark about it.

The rock was applied by the county and a bill was sent which, Decabooter said, he promptly paid.

Nolte said this was improper procedure. The money, though received, could not be resented by the Commission because it was not a budgeted fund. Still, he said, the expenditure came out of the current road funds.

Decabooter said he had sold his place and moved his cattle feeding operation to Sarpy County, because of the incident about which he complained.

At one point Commission Chairman Meivin Todd said he felt the Commission owed Decabooter an apology for "some of the statements that have come out of here." No proposal to make a formal apology was made, however.

Also appearing at the meeting was John Dietl of Nehawka who criticized Nolte for what he called "not keeping his word" about intentions concerning the Weeping Water road.

Nolte said he had done his best to further county road projects in the face of what he called "unreasonable demands for right-of-way" along the Weeping Water road.

Commissioner Herman Bornemeier said he felt Nolte had "battled us all the way on this Weeping Water federal matching project."

Throughout the 45-minute discussion, Nolte remained calm despite the words shouted at him and maintained that "improper procedure" in rocking the road prompted him to intervene.

Hospital Equipment Received through Magazine Sales

The VFW Auxiliary to Post 2543 has received the following hospital equipment through the recent magazine sale it sponsored: a hospital bed two wheel-chairs, crutches, commode and a walker.

These articles are available to anyone in Cass County without charge, the Auxiliary says.

"The Auxiliary extends its thanks to all persons who helped to purchase this hospital equipment," a unit spokesman said.
