Colored Stars

This is a good time of year to turn your attention to the colored star. They are few in the heavens, and it takes some careful attention to pick them out, but you can do it if you will pick a bright night and go about the job with determination.

A reddish star which might be seen is Mira, or the Wonderful Star, which is found in the constellation Cetus. Cetus is in the southern part of the sky. Mira becomes very bright for about ten days, about that time of year, and is reddish in color. It is much larger than the sun.

In the northeastern portion of the heavens, the bright star Capella is easy to observe, and lies in the small Constellation of the Charioteer. The Charioteer is in the northern edge of the Milky Way. Near it, down towards the east, is the orange-red star Aldebaran, which is in the constellation Taurus.

You will note that Capella and Aldebaran are the only brilliant stars high up in the whole eastern half of the heavens at about nine o'clock at night this time of year.

You can find three bright stars near the North Star. They are Vega, Deneb, and Capella — and Capella is the brightest star nearest the Pole. If you have any delusions of grandeur, when you view Capella, remember that you are seeing it as it was forty-seven years ago. It takes that long for its light to reach the earth. Capella is actually speeding away from us at the rate of nineteen miles a second.

Capella ranks third in brightness of all the stars we see in the United States, and is a faint yellow star. If you look at it tonight, and then see it again tomorrow night, it will be 1,631,600 miles farther away — which reminds you again of its immensity, scope and miracle of the heavens.

John M. Leyda, 86, long time member of the Cass County bar, died at his home in this city. Mr. Leyda was born in Ohio, January 26, 1864, son of R. K. and Catherine Leyda. He came to Cass County as a young man, first to Plattsmouth and later locating at Weeping Water. Mr. Leyda was married to Carrie Olive while a resident of Weeping Water. He had been a resident of Plattsmouth for a great many years—John Johnson, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Johnson and James Alkire, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Alkire, are leaving Omaha for San Antonio, Texas, where they are to be enrolled in the Air Cadets, part of the U. S. Air Force. Both are members of the class of 1948 of the Plattsmouth high school and for the past two years have been students of the University of Nebraska—Armistice Day was observed in the Plattsmouth schools where this had been the custom since 1919. The program was arranged by Superintendent T. I. Friest, a veteran of World War I. During the day, addresses were given at the school, Attorney R. C. Peck at the high school, Howard F. Hirz at the Central building, Leonard Brothers at the Columbian building, Attorney A. E. Chovanec at the Wintersteen Hill school. County Judge Raymond J. Case was the speaker at the St. John's school—Plattsmouth city police were surprised Sunday when they arrived at the city hall to discover that the police car, used in patrol work was missing, had apparently been taken by a joy rider. The car found had the lights burning and had been apparently driven around—Arthur D. Hull, son of Eldon Hull of this city has completed his basic training at Lackland Field and will now be given specialized work—Miss Patricia Gansemmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Gansemmer of Murray was married in a double ring ceremony to Sgt. Jerry L. Schwartz on October 16th at Fairbanks, Alaska. The ceremony took place at 8 p.m. at the chapel of the Ladd Air Base, Chaplain Charles W. Wakefield, reading the marriage lines. Mrs. Edward Johnson was maid of honor for the bride. Sgt. Edward Johnson gave the bride in marriage.

A message has been received by Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Kahler, prominent residents of Louisville, that their son, Harold Brunson, who has been stationed in Brazil for the past year in the service of the Brazilian government in the fish development bureau has not been endangered by the recent civil warfare that has swept that country. The civil warfare has caused much apprehension for foreign residents in the country—Mrs. John H. Wiles, one of Plattsmouth highly esteemed pioneer residents, was given a very pleasant surprise when all of the children came with well filled baskets to join her in the observance of her birthday. Those participating in the event were: Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Wiles, Milford, Neb.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Wiles and daughters Fredia of Murray and Mrs. Thurston Turner and little son, Thurston Charles of Plattsmouth; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wiles and daughters, Madeline, Doris June and Geraldine, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Wiles and son, Richard, of Murray; Mr. and Mrs. Garland Tibson and sons, John and Robert of Plattsmouth; Mr. and Mrs. John Beckman and daughter, Marilyn Mae of Mynard; Otto Mathis of Malvern, Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Pitz and daughters, Pauline, Helen and Margaret Ann, Plattsmouth—Earl Kirkpatrick, serving a six months sentence for auto theft, made his escape from the county jail by digging through the wall of the jail building on the north side, using a large iron screwdriver to remove mortar from between the bricks and paving way to his get away. It is thought that he was supplied the screwdriver from an outside source. Kirkpatrick was arrested in September for stealing the auto of Frank Mullen from the streets of Plattsmouth. Search was being made over the adjoining counties by the authorities.

There were 41,670 industrial accidents in Nebraska last year, an increase of 4,322. That's the report from Albert Arms, presiding judge of the Nebraska Workmen's Compensation Court. The total ranked second only to the 1945-46 fiscal year when there were 41,412 mishaps. During the 1950-51 fiscal year which ended in July, Arms reported, benefits paid out to those injured amounted to $42 million, compared with $1.5 million in the 1945-46 period. Part of the boost in accidents, the judge said in an annual report, can be traced to missile construction work in Eastern Nebraska. He also felt that employers in the Cornhusker state may be doing a more thorough job of turning in accidents since most of the boost involved less serious types of mishaps. Aged Homes Proposed rules, to become effective July 1, 1961, require state licensing for operation of homes for the aged or infirm. The State Board of Health will set up the rules, which also call for complete drawings on location of furniture and fixtures in the homes in all rooms. The proposed rules also require that persons residing in such homes get their mail unopened, have access to a telephone, be able to receive visitors in privacy, be allowed to attend church, and see a movie unless good cause can be shown to the contrary.

Budget Hearings Budget hearings, jointly by Republican Gov. Dwight Burney and Democratic Governor-elect Frank Morrison set the stage for government spending the next two years. After the hearings both men will make recommendations to the next Legislature. One of the big problems will be what to do about higher education which is fighting the salary problem yet and competition from other schools for faculty. The University of Nebraska is seeking $5.6 million more in tax funds and the four teachers colleges at Wayne, Chadron, Peru and Kearney $2.7 million more. Final clearing house for state spending is the Legislature. But senators go almost always with recommendations of the important budget committee which holds its own hearings and submits figures independent of the governor totals. Switchover It is expected there will be considerable traffic between Nebraska and Washington, D. C. in the coming months. Coming home will be the flock of Republicans who have served under the administration of President Eisenhower. Replacing them are expected to be several Nebraska Democrats. One Nebraskan already has a high position in the administration of John Kennedy. He is Ted Sorensen, named special council to Kennedy. Sorensen, of Lincoln, and Robert Kennedy have been top advisors to the President-elect. Among those Republicans returning will be Secretary of Interior Fred Seaton and Ambassador to Denmark Val Peterson. ### Morrison 'Hit Charmed Circle' After 20 Years in Politics

By Melvin Paul Statehouse Correspondent THE NEBRASKA PRESS ASSOCIATION LINCOLN — Nebraska's new governor, Democrat Frank Morrison of Lincoln, hit the charmed circle after 20 years in politics. Morrison, 55-year-old attorney, the state's 31st chief executive and the 8th Democrat, takes office in January.

Until then, he says, he doesn't plan to make any major appointments. Morrison worked in the Young Democratic organization 20 years ago, and first ran for a major office in 1948, seeking a Congressional seat. The next election he tried for governor but lost in the primary. In 1954 the attorney tried again for Congress, lieutenant governor in 1956 and in 1958 lost a whirl at the U. S. Senate post now held by Republican Roman Hruska.

Morrison admitted in general election campaigning that he was "raised a Republican" but switched parties in the 1930s. He added that he never votes a straight ticket. Shortly after his election, Morrison conferred with Republican Gov. Dwight Burney and made the rounds of the statehouse, getting set for a "smooth transition" in January.

Morrison carried few counties in the general election and won the chief executive's post by big margins in populous Lancaster and Douglas counties. There were 41,670 industrial accidents in Nebraska last year, an increase of 4,322. That's the report from Albert Arms, presiding judge of the Nebraska Workmen's Compensation Court.

The total ranked second only to the 1945-46 fiscal year when there were 41,412 mishaps. Each year, carelessness in the corn field exacts a terrible toll of fatalities, maimed limbs and crippling injuries among Nebraska farmers. Many cornpicker accidents have already been reported in the press and over the air. There is yet a good deal of corn to be picked in many areas, and in each field there lurks the danger of more injuries. Be careful!

Moisture Key To Fertilizing 'Old' Alfalfa LINCOLN — Results from either phosphate fertilizer or lime on established stands of alfalfa depends largely on the amount of available soil moisture, a University of Nebraska agronomist says in reply to a common query by farmers.

In some instances it may not pay to topdress old stands of alfalfa on upland soils with phosphate fertilizer due to soil moisture shortage, according to Clinton Hoover, soils specialist at the College of Agriculture. Alfalfa roots often grow to a depth of 25 feet or more. For the first two to three years, the alfalfa plant obtains moisture from the subsoil, Hoover explained. After this period, the subsoil becomes depleted of moisture and the crop must then rely entirely on current rainfall, often resulting in lower production.

"Under these conditions, response to phosphate fertilizer may be limited, even though soil phosphorus level is low," the University specialist said. "On the other hand, where soil moisture is adequate, (irrigated or bottomland), good results can be expected from phosphate fertilizer on established stands of alfalfa.

Lime should be applied to acid soils for legumes in order to obtain the most efficient results from applied phosphate fertilizer. Where lime alone is needed, it can be applied anytime during the year. Results will be better when soil moisture is favorable than under dry soil conditions, Hoover concluded.

RUSS MARRIAGE GLAMOR Moscow — Love and marriage, especially the marriage ceremony, are the big topics of the day among the Soviet people. All publications are filled with suggestions from readers on how to glamorize marriage, which up to now has been a drab ceremony in a shabby registry office.

The idea is supported for wedding palaces like the first one which opened in Leningrad, which is lavishly decorated and sells everything necessary for the ceremony.

One reason for opening the palaces is to supply a substitute for the church ceremonies which many young Russians are going through nowadays in reaction to the bleakness of the official civil marriage.
