Weather Forecast

The latest weather forecast indicates we are in for a severe winter in the 1960-61 season which is now only little more than a month away. Winter this year begins December 21st.

The experts say the last of the present autumn will be cooler than average for most of the nation—especially from Virginia south in the East, from Iowa south in the middle of the country and from Nevada south in the West.

Though we are in a cycle of gradually warming weather—figured in periods of fifty and a hundred and several hundred years—a temporary departure from the longer-term trend is supposed to mean colder winters than those of recent years.

The length of sunshine, per day, will begin to increase December 22nd but the coldest weather will still lie ahead. This is because the earth will have lost most of its stored heat by January and February—when the coldest weather usually occurs.

The year 1960 brought us a late summer and a late autumn in most sections. But winter, it's said, will arrive on schedule and be severe. For those who like snow and ice and fires and blustery nights, this coming winter should fit the bill. About 1965, the forecasters say, winters will begin warming again.

If you dread the colder winters, remember if there were no variety of seasons weather would get monotonous and you would not appreciate the warmer seasons when they came. So it's all arranged pretty well, after all.

How Many Will Die in Fire? Not a One, Necessarily

How many persons will die in fires during the Christmas holidays?

"Not a one, necessarily," the National Safety Council declared today. "The grim picture of frequent fires at Christmas does not need to be—not if people take a few precautions."

The Council cited these facts about fires:

1. More than 1,000 persons died last year in December—
2. Chief victims are the very young—children under 5—and persons 75 years of age or more.
3. In recent years, more than half a million homes have been struck by fire.
4. Fire losses in the home will total more than 300 million dollars this year.

To keep yourself and your loved ones from becoming fire victims, the National Safety Council makes these life-saving suggestions:

- Don't let gift wrapping accumulate so they become a fire hazard.
- Don't smoke in bed. And at holiday get-togethers, use deep ash trays that will hold burning cigarettes securely.
- Check your Christmas tree wiring for possible shorts. Better to buy a new string of lights than to risk having tragedy visit your home.
- Don't leave the Christmas tree lights burning if you're away from home or out of the room for long.
- Don't put your tree up too early. And don't leave it up so long it gets dried out. Keep it moist.
- Metallic Christmas trees are fine—if you use the floor floodlights most manufacturers recommend. Don't risk a death-dealing short by putting a string of lights on a metallic tree.

Ag Research Work Still Shows Promise

By Pearle F. Finigan
State Director of Agriculture

Work with iron compounds in reaction with starch at Midwest Research Institute continues to show promise.

According to the Midwest's latest progress report on project dealing with the utilization of starch, one possible product that could result from the work is a "monoaldehyde" starch which could become the basis for a commercial process involving large-scale starch utilization.

Industrial Amendment

The passage of the Constitutional Amendment which gives Nebraska's communities authority to issue revenue bonds to build industrial sites may considerably influence Nebraska's industrial future.

A recent article in Business Week magazine recounts how Tampa, Florida turned a 1,000 acre abandoned airport into a modern industrial park that today houses nine companies employing 1,600 persons.

Passage of the amendment shows a majority of Nebraskans no longer "like Nebraska the way it was," but want the state to aggressively move forward.

Whether or not Nebraska will move forward with the aid of the industrial site amendment is in the hands of local communities who can use it to their advantage or ignore its possibilities.

The Department of Agriculture and the Division of Resources, however, will exploit the amendment to its fullest potential in seeking to interest new industry in Nebraska.

Device Can Detect Air Vehicles at Thousands of Miles

HQ SAC — An advanced electronic device capable of depicting positions of aircraft and missiles thousands of miles away is being installed at SAC Headquarters.

The plotting system, called Iconorama, can keep track of all approaching aerospace vehicles. Aerial "intruders" are detected by the Distant Early Warning radar net work and the Ballistic Missile Early Warning System and recorded on the Iconorama.

When an unidentified aerospace vehicle is picked up on radar, it is simultaneously relayed to the North American Air Defense Command Headquarters at Colorado Springs, Colo., and SAC. This reduces the amount of time required to report and plot suspected aerial intruders and thus provides additional warning to NORAD or SAO forces.

By projecting automatically drawn tracks on a large screen the new system can do the work of six men at the old clear-plastic plotting boards used since World War II.

The screen can also depict the route and possible impact area of approaching missiles.

Attached to the Iconorama screen is a level-of-threat warning panel which indicates warning of missile attack and estimated number of missiles in flight.

Traces made by the planes being tracked are marked on a coated slide by a moving stylus on the Iconorama. The slide plot measures only one inch square, yet overall error of the projected display is said to be about one part in 1,000.

As many slides as are needed may be used to cover a given situation. Each is projected on the viewing screen in its own identifying color.

When the slides become filled with tracks, or the situation is over, the slides are automatically replaced. Each removed slide can be filed as part of the flight record of the plane it represents.

Metabulfite Shouldn't Be Used on Wheat

LINCOLN — A new product containing sodium metabulfite which has just recently come on the market is causing much concern among flour millers and members of the grain trade, a University of Nebraska specialist said this week.

Duane Foote, secretary of the Nebraska Grain Improvement Association, said the product is designed to control mold growth in high-moisture corn and grain sorghum being stored for feed.

Although it is not sold for use with wheat, it is feared that the product might be used by farmers or elevator operators to treat new-crop wheat with this chemical storage aid, Foote explained.

"Products containing sodium metabulfite have shown drastic effects on wheat gluten quality," he continued. "Peak time or mixing time has been cut three or four minutes, mixing tolerance index, which measures drop-off of dough consistency or stiffness during mixing, was altered drastically from normal to almost no doughlike consistency," he said.

Use of sodium metabulfite on grain which will be used for seed or wheat entering market channels should be avoided, Foote stressed. The chemical releases sulfur dioxide, and it is reported that four to six weeks may be required before the characteristic pungent odor leaves the treated grain, the crops official said.

"Germination is decreased when grain has been exposed sufficiently to action of sodium metabulfite or sodium sulfite," he concluded.
