Mrs. R. M. writes in the Brockton Times: "My little nephew had been on a vacation on the farm. When he came back, I asked him if he'd had a nice time and he replied: 'boldly'. "Yes, it was great fun watching the farmer pulling the cow's faucets."

Nebraska 4-H'ers Are Delegates To National Congress in Chicago

Four 4-H Club members from a city, a ranch, a farm and a town prove Nebraska's wide range of 4-H excellence as the 1960 state winners, and will make all-expense trips to the national congress in Chicago starting November 27.

All are presidents of their local 4-H Clubs, and all will be competing for scholarships awarded by their hosts. They were selected on the basis of their 4-H record by the state Extension staff.

Penny Bailey

Miss Penny Bailey, 18, of Omaha took the award in health. Her host will be Eli Lilly and Company. Biss Bailey's interest in a health project was spurred to action by a younger brother's bout with rheumatic fever a few years ago. She has since made many worthwhile contributions in personal, family and community health activities.

Now a freshman at Nebraska Wesleyan, she recalls with a sense of satisfaction and pride the medals, awards, ribbons and plaques acquired during her 10 years in 4-H. She maintains that the lessons she learned best are written on "invisible pages" in her memory book.

Gary Thayer, 17, of Grant, is winner in the electric program. This Perkins county lad "can't remember the time" he hasn't wanted to be an electrical engineer.

A high school senior, he is well on his way with a seven-week engineering course at Rolla, Missouri under his belt. He also holds a first place physics medal in the interscholastic contest.

In 4-H for eight years, his first electric project was a test light he's still using. Next he made a tent light and sold duplicates to 4-H campers. Thayer built his first radio in '57, and after that he tackled a crystal set made from parts like bottle caps and bits of assorted wire. This project won a purple ribbon at state fair and is still a favorite accomplishment because it was "complicated enough to be interesting." Thayer also has made a model satellite.

This versatile lad has won awards in public speaking, acted as junior superintendent of judging and range management at fairs.

His Chicago host is Westinghouse Educational Foundation.

Gary Fick, 17, who lives on a 2,700-acre ranch outside Inman in Holt county took honors in the agricultural program. He's stuck close to his ranching interests, and his trips to state and county fairs have brought a procession of honors.

Four straight purple ribbons in range conservation, three in forestry, five gold medals for grass identification, state champion range judge, plus six awards and a purple ribbon in public speaking are highlights of his seven years in 4-H.

Two other memorable events were his TV demonstration of livestock loss prevention in Sioux City and the news that he will represent Nebraska in the Chicago livestock demonstration.

Fick will be the guest of International Harvester Co. during the 4-H Club Congress.

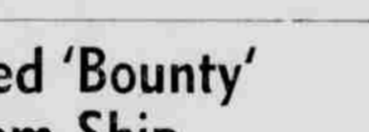

Cheryl Abrahamson, 17, of Atwell, Kearney county, is tops in the frozen foods department. She was the key member in organizing a 4-H Club in her town.

Gary Fick

Resides her main field of food preservation, Miss Abrahamson, who is a high school senior, has won medals in the dress revue program and represented her county at state fair.

She has enjoyed being a camp counselor, and after nine years of 4-H work, intends to carry on the family tradition as a leader. Donor of her trip is Whirlpool Corporation.

Replica of Famed 'Bounty' Carries Nail from Ship

Balboa, Canal Zone — A duplicate of the H. M. S. Bounty, victim of the famous mutiny, is under sail for Tahiti with a nail from the original vessel as part of her hull.

The bronze sheathing nail was hammered into the vessel during the ship's passage through the Panama Canal by Luis Marden, the National Geographic Society's veteran undersea photographer. Mr. Marden found the remains of the original Bounty off lonely Pitcairn Island in 1957. The exact location of the ship had been unknown since January 23, 1790, when Fletcher Christian scuttled her to keep from being discovered in exile.

The new Bounty, built at Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, is being sailed to Tahiti, the destination of the original ship. There a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer unit, headed by Marlon Brando, Trevor Howard, and Hugh Griffiths will go aboard to shoot scenes for a wide-screen, color remake of "Mutiny on the Bounty," done in 1935 with Charles Laughton and Clark Gable.

Oak from N. J. Used
The new Bounty, 110 feet long at the waterline and 30 feet wide, was made with oak from New Jersey and fir from British Columbia. The masts were individually fashioned with a broadax. The was constructed from original plans, now in the British Admiralty Museum.

Above decks, the new vessel faithfully copies the original. Below, she has two auxiliary engines, five electrical generators, fuel tanks, electrical galley, and comfortable accommodations for 40 persons.

A specially selected crew of 23 men, ranging in age from 16 to 69, will keep the ship under sail as much time as is needed to get experience in handling the vessel. Mr. Marden, a technical consultant and member of the crew, will prepare an article for the National Geographic Magazine on the Bounty's 20th-century voyage.

He found the Bounty's remains while collecting material for a story about descendants of the mutineers still living on Pitcairn Island. After six weeks of diving, he spotted some encrusted sheathing nails. Eventually he uncovered hull fittings, an anchor, and fragments of copper, with which the Bounty had been sheathed.

Mr. Marden has with him a copy of the original vessel's log, which relates events leading up to the mutiny, called by Captain Bligh, "one of the most atrocious acts of piracy ever committed."

Bligh Describes Mutiny

"Just before sun-rising," Bligh wrote later, "Mr. Christian, with the master at arms, gunner's mate, and Thomas Burket, seaman, came into my cabin while I was asleep, and seizing me, tied my hands with a cord behind my back and threatened me with instant death. If I spoke or made the least noise: I, however, called so loud as to alarm everyone; but the had already secured the officers who were not of their party. Christian had only a cutlass in his hands the others had muskets and bayonets. I was hauled out of bed and forced on deck in my shirt..."

Bligh and 18 loyal officers and men were set adrift in a launch. A master navigator, Bligh accomplished the incredible feat of sailing 3,618 nautical miles across the Pacific to the Dutch settlement at Timor. He battled 41 days against starvation, thirst, pitiless sun, and the cruel sea itself to achieve the world's most celebrated open-boat voyage.

Fletcher Christian and his men sailed back to Tahiti, their island paradise, where 16 elected to remain ashore. The others, along with 12 Tahitian women and a little girl, sailed to Pitcairn Island, and were not discovered until 18 years later, by which time all but one of the mutineers were dead.

Repellant To Trees Now
GRAND ISLAND — Rabbit repellent should be applied to tree plantings now if they are to be protected this winter, according to Joe Range, District Extension forester stationed here.

"Last year rabbit damage was severe in many plantings," Range said. The chewing and gnawing by rabbits kills or greatly reduces the growth of trees.

Several products are available for use in protecting trees from rabbits, Range stated. The most effective seem to be those containing thiram, he continued. These include Arasan 42-8 and SFM, and Penco animal repellent. Other effective products are Z. I. P. and Ringwood repellent. These, however, have been reported to be somewhat injurious to evergreen species, the Extension specialist cautioned.

These repellents can be applied either by brushing on the tree or as a spray application. The material should completely cover small trees and on larger trees, the bark should be treated to a height that rabbits might reach during periods of heaviest snow, Range advised.
