'Suddenly Last Summer' Plays at Cass Theater

A superb, star-laden cast topped by Elizabeth Taylor, Katharine Hepburn and Montgomery Clift has been assembled by Sam Spiegel for his powerful motion picture version of Tennessee Williams' play, "Suddenly, Last Summer." Playing Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, January 15-16-17 at the Cass Theatre, the new drama is a Columbia Pictures' release, one of the year's 10 best according to the National Board of Review.

Seldom has such star power been gathered of the calibre of Miss Taylor, who has twice been nominated for Academy laurels, for her work in "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" and "Raintree County," Clift and Miss Hepburn.

Spiegel himself is a painstaking producer who strives for the highest quality; he made "The African Queen" and won Academy Awards for both "On the Waterfront" and "Bridge on the River Kwai." Joseph L. Mankiewicz, winner of "Oscars" for writing and directing "A Letter to Three Wives" and "All About Eve," directed "Suddenly, Last Summer." Gore Vidal, top-flight novelist and playwright, collaborated with Tennessee Williams on the screenplay of "Suddenly, Last Summer," which is said to hit a new emotional peak in motion picture making.

Is Drilling or Row Planting Of Beans Best?

LINCOLN — Non-irrigated soybeans produce maximum yields when planted in rows 20 to 21 inches apart, according to studies at the University of Nebraska and other Midwestern experiment stations.

"Beans planted in rows 35 to 42 inches apart yielded 10 to 15 per cent less than those planted in rows 20 to 21 inches apart," reports J. C. Swinbank, Extension agronomist at the College of Agriculture.

"Most soybeans in Nebraska, however, are planted in 36-40 inch rows because the machinery available in the principle soybean-producing areas is not readily adapted to narrower row spacing."

"On land where weeds are well under control, solid drillings have given yields equal to or greater than the common row spacings," the agronomist points out. "Solid drilling can be recommended only where it is known that the fields are relatively free of weeds."
