The Second Surest Thing

By Carroll Kraus
School of Journalism Depth Reporting Class
(Fourth in a Series)

EDITOR'S NOTE: A survey by the University of Nebraska School of Journalism Depth Reporting Class indicates that 25 of the 43 members of the 1961 legislative session would favor the "right" tax-broadening bill. The senators agreed that taxation would be possibly the biggest issue of the current session. This is the fourth in a series examining Nebraska's taxation—past and present. Today's installment—Why Not Local Tax Broadening?

The whole discussion of a broadened tax base on the state level leads some people to say "Why broaden the state tax base at all? Let's get real tax relief by inaugurating a local sales or income tax or both." Local taxes in Nebraska are running five to six times as high as state property taxes.

But N. U. tax expert Dr. E. B. Schmidt says experience has proved that local sales and income taxes cannot be successfully administered unless the local agencies are located in a state which uses the tax or taxes on a statewide basis.

He says that a local sales tax in this situation will hardly work because:

—Businesses will be affected and may move outside the tax area, but still within easy reach of the customer.

—It would be necessary to distinguish between resident (taxable) and non-resident (non-taxable) sales and income.

—High administrative costs are inevitable.

—No taxable sales will occur in some areas which have no incorporated governmental units.

—Another of the often asked questions pertaining to a broadened tax base is how much money will a sales tax or an income tax raise. While Schmidt says the questions are logical ones, they can't be answered successfully unless the terms of the proposed tax are clearly and completely defined.

There are several varieties of each tax and the rate of each can vary; application can be made broad or narrow.

He says: "No one expert or otherwise, can give you an accurate estimate of how much a sales or income tax will raise unless the rate, terms and application of the proposed tax are clearly and precisely defined."

Another question that often arises in discussion of the sales tax has to do with "regressivity," a regressive tax being one which weighs more on the low-income ones. Many have accepted the belief that the sales tax is notoriously regressive; that it makes "the poor man pay more than the rich man."

But Schmidt says a number of experimental studies have shown that the sales tax is not as regressive as is commonly believed.

The professor also points out that state law protects the small taxpayer just as it protects the large taxpayer. Since these governmental services have value, they can be measured in terms of supplementary income gain or loss.

He says studies show that these services constitute an income boost for low income groups but constitute a loss, or subtraction, from the middle and high income groups.

Backers of a broadened tax base often point to other states in advancing their arguments for a sales or income tax. More than 30 states have retail sales taxes, generally at 2 or 3 per cent. As many as 36 might be included and this list contains the names of all the states on Nebraska's borders, Iowa, Missouri, Colorado, South Dakota and Wyoming all have 2 per cent sales taxes. Kansas' rate is 2½ per cent, upped a half cent on the dollar only recently.

Seven states have adopted the sales tax since 1950.

About 23 states have combination sales-income taxes and approximately 13 have income taxes alone.

It should be pointed out, however, that no two states are alike in what is taxed, especially in the case of the sales tax, thereby causing the difficulty in any enumeration of have and havenot states in regard to these two methods of taxation.

As far as exemptions go in sales taxes, food and food products are exempt from the sales tax in eight states as are other miscellaneous items. A large

Legislature Besieged by Flood Of Bills; More Will Come

LINCOLN—Bills continue to pour into the Nebraska Legislature, now in its second week. Individual senators will have through Jan. 30 to introduce bills, then only standing committees or the governor may do so. The first week of activity produced 111 proposed new laws, many of them eliminating obsolete sections of statutes or harmonizing them with others.

Early indications are there will be much debate over proposals introduced; to allow other elected officials to run for governor, having the governor and lieutenant governor run for four year terms as a team, and extending term of state senators to four years.

Now, every elected official but the governor cannot seek the governorship without waiting for two years after his term expires.

Even the lieutenant governor cannot file for the governorship without abiding by the same provision of the Constitution that requires the waiting period.

Veteran observers noted that the first few days of the bill introduction period produced fewer bills than normal.

Many senators feel there will be less legislation proposed this session. Others think the total bills will hit the 800 mark.

Now it is too early to guess at the final total.

Governor Morrison
Frank Brenner Morrison, a 55-year-old Lincoln attorney and Democrat, is Nebraska's 31st governor. He is the eighth Democrat to hold the office.

What type of person is he? Morrison is six feet, three inches tall and weighs 225 pounds. He has a firm handshake, graying hair, good speaking voice and likes to meet people.

He was born at Golden, Colorado, May 20, 1905, was graduated from the University of Nebraska law college in 1931 and began practicing in Maywood in Frontier county in 1932.

His middle name is the family name of his mother.

The Morrions have two sons, Frank Jr., and Jon, and one daughter, Jean.

Both Morrison and his wife, Maxine, were Republicans at one time but changed parties in the 30s.

He is Gene Mahoney, a former officer with the Omaha Police Department, who will be in my office in Room 600 Insurance Building. He has a copy of the film report on the riots in San Francisco against a committee of the Congress. This film is available for clubs and civic groups and may be booked by calling Mr. Mahoney. The number is 345-4646.

This year the Congress and the Presidency will be in control of the same party for the first time in six years. After Senator Kennedy takes office on January 20, he will send his legislative program to Congress.

I intend to examine each proposal most carefully to determine the effect on Nebraska and the nation. Those proposals which I feel are worthy and in the best interests of the country will have my support. But I will continue to oppose any budget-busting proposals from the new President or from within the Congress as I have done these last four years.

Work on the platforms and stands in front of the Capitol began more than three months before inaugural date. It takes that long—every four years—to erect all the Capitol stands.

The steel framework is saved from inauguration to inauguration, which holds down the cost of the ceremonies. But like most things, the cost has been rising since 30 and 40 years ago.

In 1925 the bill was $26,803 for Calvin Coolidge's inaugural. Hoover's ceremonies in 1929 cost $32,222, then the expense dipped to $22,089 for F. D. R.'s first term, but it has been rising ever since.

This year a $250,000 sum is available, up $40,000 from 1957.

The Bum
A man rushed excitedly into the smoking car of a train. "A lady has just fainted in the next car," he cried. "Has anybody got any whiskey?"

Immediately several flasks were brought out. He seized the nearest one, tilted it back took a drink, and returned it, saying, "Thanks a lot. It always did make me sick to see a lady faint."

He Didn't Understand
"What are the alumni chipping for now?"
"It's the football team, old man. We want to get them a sound coach."
"Hadn't we better get a motor bus?"

By Rep. Glenn Cunningham
Washington, D.C. (Special)—This is the first of my weekly reports on the new 87th Congress. I shall look forward to bringing you some of the behind-the-scenes news from Washington in this column, and I hope some of your questions will be answered.

As in the past, I deeply appreciate the cooperation of Nebraska newspaper editors who use this column each week.

I will have a representative working full time in Omaha now to talk with anyone who has a problem involving the Federal Government or who might desire other information about Congress or Washington affairs.

He is Gene Mahoney, a former officer with the Omaha Police Department, who will be in my office in Room 600 Insurance Building. He has a copy of the film report on the riots in San Francisco against a committee of the Congress. This film is available for clubs and civic groups and may be booked by calling Mr. Mahoney.
