Worries Are Relative

If you are currently worried about business problems, weather problems, remember that your worries are relative. Ten years from now, as the saying goes, you will have forgotten all about your current worries, in nine out of ten cases.

That alone is not sufficient comfort to allay one's worries, but you should also remember that there are many people who have greater, more critical problems than you do. And almost anyone can look around him and find many things for which he should be very thankful.

That thought came to mind recently when we were reading a warning to the people and visitors in Switzerland about avalanches. The warning included five steps visitors or native Swiss should take if they heard the terrifying warning of an avalanche above.

First, those endangered are warned to throw away ski poles. They become anchored in the snow.

Second, ski harness should be loosened so that it can be kicked off.

Third, one's mouth should be covered with a scarf or handkerchief, since inhalation of icy powder which comes with an avalanche is fatal.

Fourth, when the wall of snow hits one is supposed to try and swim with the rushing snow and rock mass, which sometimes hits a speed of over two hundred miles an hour, and which may shoot over a cliff and fall a thousand or more feet.

Fifth, at the end of the trail, one is supposed to remain calm and dig himself out slowly without exhausting himself.

If you do not have to worry about this, you have something to be thankful for. At least, one can think of many more enjoyable things than swimming with an ice and rock avalanche over a mountain side, down hill and dale, and then digging himself out calmly, while not getting exhausted.

"New Industry Is Outlook for Mo. River — Grape Vineyards on Rugged Buffs Lands Would Create New Field for the Farmers—so read a headline in the Plattsmouth Journal of Jan. 16, 1931. The accompanying story said "This section of the west where the Missouri River bluffs offer the greatest possible field for expanding of the grape industry, is attracting attention in many parts of the country as a future place for the establishment of the manufacturing of products of the grape. It has long been urged by many of our people that the hills and bluffs along the Nebraska side of the Missouri River would make wonderful vineyards and in fact the farmers who have established small vineyards have received a splendid crop from them but the fact that the market for this product was limited has discouraged a great many from trying to increase their output of the grapes — There is no doubt that a supply sufficient to maintain a large factory could easily be raised in the vicinity of Plattsmouth and which would give a new field of operation to the farming communities and utilize land that is not the very best for the growth of corn or other farm crops." — The construction of the overhead crossing at LaPlatte, to start shortly, was to bring a number of men to Plattsmouth to live while they worked on the project. The overhead crossing was "a great safety measure for Highway No. 75 as it removes the menace of the double grade railroad crossing which has so long been the subject of federal negotiation." — Charles Ault and Louis Lohnes closed a deal whereby they became owners of the pool hall on the south side of Main Street formerly owned and operated by A. M. Arries.—The Plattsmouth High Basketball team was to go to Auburn to seek win No. 4 after victories over Blair, Omaha North and Glenwood.

The contest to determine the most popular little girl who was to receive the beautiful dolls at the store of M. Fanger are Alice Harris with 419,350 votes; Josephine Janda, 351,960; and Mary Wynn, 273,350.—While in Lincoln attending the session of the territorial pioneers Hon. R. B. Windham of this city was a caller at the state house of representatives, the scene of many notable sessions of which he had been a member and his appearance on the floor was the occasion of an invitation from members to speak on some of the issues of the day. Mr. Windham stated that the first bill he had introduced had been for the establishing of a state reformatory and he had always been strongly in favor of a measure of that nature.—Emil J. Weyrich of this city, of the firm of Weyrich and Hadraba, has received a letter from the general manager of the phonograph industry of Thomas A. Edison Company, giving a few words of praise for the work of Mr. Weyrich in the construction of the fine Italian Renaissance cabinet which he just recently completed.
