The Miracle of Time

in all human experience and progress, no man has ever solved the puzzle of time. What is it - or is it anything. Einstein believed there was no logical plan for the human measurement of time.

We say, for example, that we spent an hour doing this-and-so, but what is an hour other than a man-made measurement of seconds ticked off on a clock? Likewise a day and a month are man-made measurements of what we call time. But in the scheme of nature and life is there any delineation of February, where it ends, and where March begins?

There is only a cycle of life in nature, no man-made measures are valid. And Einstein believed that a cycle of life is the key measurement - and that when cycles of life can be prolonged, time might be made to stand still!

Einstein believed that matter changed its actual form when propelled through pace at great velocity. And if there is a peed at which no further movement is possible, as many believe, then time might indeed be made to stand still, as far as the human life cycle is concerned.

But so much for the high-flown scientific theories: What about our own, manmeasured time? The great thinkers have tried to define it and appraise it and the conclusion of the vast majority is that time is our most precious possession. Think about that thesis.

It is the one thing we always have less of — tomorrow. We cannot increase our supply of it, as we can money and material things. We cannot buy more of it. We only have a limited amount of time. in which to live our lives to the best of our abilities.

So the lesson of this must be: Spend your time carefully and wisely. Each day you have so many hours to spend. Do not waste them or fail to learn, or accomplish something. And time will fool you, in the end, when its supply is running out. So do not postpone, until the last, the good work you will do. Time passes faster as age in-

To the youngster a year seems a lifetime. To a person of fifty it seems a short span indeed. And, as we learn to appreciate time, and want to have more of it, it passes faster and faster. Like the sun, when it is high in the heavens, it seems scarcely to be moving. When it reaches the sunset, on the horizon, it literally plunges from view. Time, like the sun, is constantly passing. Use it to advantage while it lingers with you on this earth.
