Vaccination Of Feeder Cattle Urged

LINCOLN — Vaccination of pregnant cattle for rednose (Infectious thymotracheitis) is not recommended unless there is exposure or danger of exposure to the disease, a University of Nebraska specialist warned this week.

It may become necessary to vaccinate pregnant dairy or stock cows when widespread outbreaks of rednose occur, according to Dr. E. Crosby Howe, Extension animal hygienist at the College of Agriculture.

Vaccination of all feeder cattle is recommended, either 10-14 days before shipment or immediately on arrival at the feed lot, Dr. Howe emphasized.

The disease is caused by a virus and the onset is sudden, he reported. "There is rapid loss of weight, extreme dehydration, loss of appetite, and difficult breathing with excessive discharge from eyes, nose and mouth."

In severe cases, Howe added, animals will gasp for breath. The name "rednose," he explained, comes from the fact that in some cases there are tiny hemorrhages under the surface skin of the muzzle that cause it to become bright red. After a day or two the blood turns dark and the nose then appears black or dark brown, dry and hard.

"Up to 95 per cent of a herd may contract the disease," the veterinarian said. "Although the death loss is low — 5 to 10 per cent — the greatest loss is due to the inability of the recovered animals to gain properly."

There is no specific treatment for the disease, the University spokesman said, although antibiotics and sulfas help to keep secondary bacterial infections in check, and help to prevent the development of pneumonia. Blood or blood plasma are also of value in maintaining or establishing the animal's fluid balance, he noted.

"Prevention is the important thing when dealing with this disease," he concluded.

7-Number Dial Plan Progresses Lincoln telephone numbers will be changed to seven numerals on a gradual basis beginning March 1, 1961, with completion Dec. 1, 1962.

The new telephone numbering system, known as All Number Calling, eliminates the use of letters in phone numbers. Instead, numbers are made up of seven numerals only.

A. B. Waters, area commercial supervisor of The Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Company, said that All Number Calling was adopted recently by the telephone industry as the nationwide telephone number system. It is now being introduced gradually throughout the United States.

Beginning March 1 at Lincoln, all numerals will be used for installations, moves and changes of service where a change of listing is involved. Such orders will be processed in the directory and information records and the directory published December 1, 1961 will list both types of numbers. The change to All Number Calling in Lincoln will be completed on December 1, 1962 when all telephone numbers will be listed in the directory with all numerals.

Across the country, many cities are now making the change to All Number Calling, Waters said.

In this area, changes to all Number Calling were made last year in Union and Greenwood.

This year, Murray was changed Jan. 24 and LT&T plans to adopt All Number Calling at Ashland, Elmwood and Nehawka.
