

Bond Issue of $200,000 Seen To Finance Sewage Treatment Plant

The Board of Public Works is contemplating a revenue and bond issue of about $200,000 to finance the city's share of payment for the new Sewage Treatment Plant, Board Manager Robert Cappell told the Rotary Club Tuesday noon.

He spoke briefly on the construction of the plant, just put into operation, and financing before taking the club on a tour of the plant site, just below the Burlington Railroad tracks east of Lower Main Street.

Cappell said the current Sewer Use Tax (about 95 per cent of propertyholders pay the residential minimum of $1 a month) will raise about $21,000 annually and the current 2½ mill levy for sewer plant and maintenance will provide another $10,000.

The $31,000 annual revenue should be adequate to cover expense of plant operation and bond retirement, according to the Board's calculations.

Cappell today said the public is invited to visit the plant anytime. He remarked that the Rotary Club, and anyone, would be surprised at the cleanliness and lack of offensiveness of the installation.

He said a greater percentage of the $182,832 plant cost is in concrete and pipe construction beneath the ground.

Units which are visible are the control manhole in which flow is regulated, a screening and shredding device, grit removal unit, pumping station to lift treated sewage to the river when high water level prohibits usual gravity flow, a control building used as office, laboratory and maintenance headquarters, a primary clarifier where to separate liquids and solids, a digester to digest sludge, sludge drying beds, a dike enclosure topped by a fence and an access road.

The outfall sewer, 24 inches to the plant and 27 inches from the plant to the river, cost $102,828.

The total contract cost was $286,000. Engineering, inspection, legal, interest, administrative and miscellaneous costs raise the total to about $315,000.

A federal government grant of $73,017, the maximum at the time the grant was approved, is the federal share of construction cost under the Federal Water Pollution Control Act.

Plattsmouth State Bank has financed plant and outfall cost to date.

Cappell said the plant was designed to handle a population of 7,500, the level "normal" foreseeable growth will see Plattsmouth attain about 1975.

Cappell, Rotary vice president, was program chairman for the day. As guests he had Mayor Grant Roberts, City Councilman Warren Rhylander, City Clerk Albert Olson, City Attorney Harold Lebons, Board of Public Works Chairman C. A. Johnson, Board Secretary John Cloldt Sr., City Engineering Inspector Jim Markham and D. E. Sumpter, construction superintendent for Purtzer and Dutton of Kansas which built the plant.

City Councilman Al Huebner is Rotary president and Board of Public Works member Carl Schneider is also a Rotarian.

Larry Toothaker and Bill Senf, high school Rotarians of the month told of their plans—Toothaker to go to the University of Nebraska to study engineering and go out for track; Senf to work this summer, then go to school to study commercial art.

Swine Showmen Should Select 4-H Hogs Now

LINCOLN — Now is the time to select market hogs for showing in late summer and early fall, Nebraska 4-H club members were reminded this week.

This is necessary in order to assure that show animals will qualify under established maximum weight limitations, according to Dave Williams, Extension animal husbandman at the College of Agriculture.

"Lower and upper weight limits of 190 and 240 pounds, respectively, will be enforced at the Nebraska State Fair this year," Williams stated.

Ideally, pigs should be five to 5½ months of age and weigh 200-225 lbs. when they reach the show ring, and ultimately, the market place, he continued. Healthy feeder pigs which are being weaned now (6-8 weeks of age) and weigh 40-50 lbs. can be brought along to market weight by an experienced feeder in approximately three months.

Pigs which are in the lower market weight range of 190-220 lbs. at the time most county fairs are held will likely be within the 240 lb. limit at State Fair time.

If 4-H clubbers select feeder pigs from the family herd, they should be separated from the main group and fed separately.

In any event, the potential show-market hog should come from a gilt or sow known to be desirable as far as backfat is concerned, Williams stressed.

Other desirable characteristics include moderate body length, natural muscling over the back and loin, and a deep, plump, meaty ham. The pig should also be trim about the jaw and around the base of the ham.

Pigs should be wormed as soon as they are selected, Williams concluded.

Lyndon B. Johnson, Vice President:

"We are engaged in a decisive competition in which we will be measured by the efforts we make as by the end we attain."
