Drivers Give Formulas For Curbing Death Toll

Following are a question and answers, the result of interrogation of motorists by a member of the American Society of Safety Engineers concerning the highway safety problem:

The Question: What should we do to help halt the traffic fatality spiral which inflicts our summer vacation months?

(Drivers in St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Morgantown and other cities . . . recently visited . . . give their answers).

The Answers: One Driver Warns: "Eliminate tight schedules . . . A tight schedule kills like POISON!" Even on a short overnight trip . . . take a toothbrush along . . . stay overnight rather than risk a trip back at night, dead tired . . . remember too . . . that early to start . . . early to stop . . . is best . . . for every hop!

2. Another admonishes: "Get rid of the TIRED homebound vacationist and you'll save hundreds of lives! He misjudges passing distance and passing speed . . . forces his on-coming buddy into the ditch . . . loses out on reaction time . . . 'peeps' out completely when he falls asleep!"

3. The third high-light: The need for more COURTESY . . . for the goodwill it engenders . . . and for the good driving it promotes . . .

4. Another observes: "Good Driving takes COURTESY AND CONCENTRATION every split second of the trip . . . But this is too big a job for a tired vacationist . . . He cannot adequately cope with the job of outguessing the other drivers . . . anticipating conditions . . . and fighting sudden hazards."

Certainly, he should see to it that he is refreshed and alert before starting . . . He should be frank enough to acknowledge the least sign of personal fatigue and compensate for it by slowing down . . . using extra care . . . taking more frequent rest stops . . . eliminating fixed schedules and advance reservations . . . ruling out a 600 mile-day when fit only for a 400 mile one (You can stretch a rubber band . . . but not a human being!)"

5. The fifth recommends: "Attack the 'It-Can't-Happen-to-Me' attitude . . . by promoting the showing of recent close-to-home accident scenes . . ."

6. The sixth suggests: "A personal campaign against the re-

Low Test Weight Wheat for Seed . . . Only If

LINCOLN—Low test weight wheat is suitable for planting if two conditions are met, a University of Nebraska crops specialist stated this week.

J. C. Swinbank, Extension agronomist at the College of Agriculture, warned that weed seeds and badly shrunken or diseased kernels must be removed by fanning, and the normal drill setting should be maintained.

Diseased or badly shrunken kernels may not germinate, he explained; or if they do, they produce weak plants that "add little to the crop."

In 21 years of testing at the University Agricultural Experiment Station, it was found that yields from small seed were distinctly inferior to those from large seed when seed was spaced when planted to provide the same number of seeds per acre for both kinds of seed.

This inferiority could be compensated for by increasing the number of seeds per acre when the same drill setting was used for both small and large seeds, the University specialist indicated.

"Under these conditions there was little difference in yield," Swinbank said. The tests also showed there

Influenza Vaccine

WASHINGTON (ANS) — The Army has announced that influenza vaccine will be administered during October to all Army personnel on active duty.

In addition, personnel who begin active duty prior to August 1, 1962, including those entering in excess of 30 days, will receive the vaccine as soon as practicable after entry.

Vaccination on a voluntary basis will be offered in overseas areas to dependents of U. S. military personnel and to other personnel for whom Army medical facilities have logistic responsibility.

was no material difference in the plant height, ripening date or test weight of the grain in the resulting crop.

"In any case, pure seed of a variety recommended for the community should always be used," Swinbank cautioned. Variety mixtures or rye in wheat tend to reduce the yields and market quality of the crop, he concluded.

'Cicada Killers' May Hurt Lawn

LINCOLN — Those large black and yellow wasps which have been attracting a lot of attention around the home and yard are likely to be around from now until fall, a University of Nebraska insect specialist said this week.

R. E. Roselle, Extension entomologist at the College of Agriculture, explained that the wasps capture cicadas, paralyze them through stinging, then carry them to a burrow in the ground. An egg is deposited on each cicada, which then serves as food for the wasp larva.

Cicada killers are not aggressive, Roselle noted, but may injure lawns by burrowing. He suggested controlling them with a liberal dusting of 10 per cent DDT or five per cent Chlordane dust into the burrows. If the wasps are active, the insecticide may be applied at night, he advised.
