'H' Bonds Can Be Held for 10 More Years

Some half-million Americans who own Series H Savings Bonds bought between June, 1952, and January, 1957, are in for a nice surprise—one that will bring extra money into their pockets.

Walter H. Smith County Savings Bonds Chairman, calls attention to a recent change in Treasury regulations permitting owners of these maturing H Bonds to continue holding them for an additional 10 years at a straight 3 3/4 percent annually.

Smith pointed out that these H Bonds were originally issued to pay an average of 3 percent annually for the nine-year, eight-month life of the bond. "In 1959, this rate was increased so as to bring the final yields to maturity up to a range of 3.12 percent to 3.36 percent. Under new regulations, these particular bonds, the first of which matures in February 1962, will return in semi-annual interest checks a straight 3 3/4 percent interest during the extension period.

"Holders of these Series H Savings Bonds will be notified by the Treasury of the extension privilege granted them when they receive their next to last interest check. Owners will not have to do anything about extending their H Bonds. This is automatic. As long as the H Bond is not redeemed, the owner will continue to draw semi-annual interest checks at the new, higher rate of 3 3/4 percent interest for a full ten years."

The Series H Bond when introduced in June 1952, was custom-made to satisfy the needs of Americans who wanted a current-income bond which would be free from market fluctuations and would possess the same safety features and guaranteed interest rate as the popular Series E Bond. There are now close to one and one-half million H Bond accounts with an investment of some six billion dollars. Nearly 160,000 new accounts are opened yearly. Yearly H Bond sales now approach a billion dollars.
