Congressman
GLENN CUNNINGHAM

Washington, D. C. (Special)—Rumors continue to circulate in Washington that Congress will be held in session until the Berlin crisis passes. I do not believe there is a need for prolonging this session of Congress any longer for three reasons:

1. The Berlin crisis will probably be with us for years, according to diplomatic and military leaders.
2. Representatives and Senators could easily reassemble in Washington in a short time in this day of high-speed transportation.
3. Congress has already responded to the President's requests for authority to act in the Berlin matter.

Of course, if the President as the Nation's Commander-in-Chief believes it would strengthen his position in regard to Berlin if Congress stays in session, I am sure the members of Congress will do what the President asks.

Actually, there are many in Washington who believe that Berlin—as serious as that situation is—will not be the main source of trouble from the Communists in coming months. There are reports that we can expect a renewed Chinese Communist offensive in the Far East, even an attack on the off-shore islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

And of course the Laos situation remains critical, even though it has been pushed off the front page by the Berlin maneuvers. Communist negotiators are engaged in their usual stalling tactics in negotiations over Laos, making ridiculous demands and blocking consideration of all reasonable proposals to settle the Laos situation.

1st Unemployment Check Was Paid 25 Years Ago

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Twenty-five years ago on August 17, a jobless Wisconsin worker received the first State unemployment insurance check ever issued. His check was for $15.

Marking this occasion, President Kennedy and Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg pointed out in Washington that over $28 billion has been paid in benefits since the unemployment insurance program was begun in 1936.

Writing to the Secretary, Mr. Kennedy said the money paid since 1936 has "eased the financial burden of many millions of workers" and contributed materially to softening the impact of economic downturns on business by maintaining the purchasing power of unemployed workers.

He called the anniversary "a milestone in the progress of social legislation" and declared:

"The contribution that the unemployment insurance program has made to the nation over the years points up the desirability of the improvements in the program we have recommended to the Congress, which we hope will be enacted early in the next session."

Secretary Goldberg, in a letter to the President, noted that in 1939, the first year in which all States participated in the Federal-State unemployment insurance program 21.4 million people worked at jobs covered by unemployment insurance. Today about 46.5 million have such protection.

"Behind these statistics," he said, "lie the great human contributions of unemployment insurance in preserving family unity and morale at times of financial crisis for the unemployed worker."

"The American people can take just pride in the accomplishments of this program which they, through their elected representatives, have created to safeguard workers, their families, and the economy against the hazards of temporary loss of purchasing power."

He said the Labor Department, together with State employment security agencies, would strive "to fulfill to an even greater extent the role of the unemployment insurance program in minimizing the personal and economic effects of unemployment."

the first time in history, every agency of the national Government is working together to achieve this goal.

"I am hopeful that the bills to improve the conditions of the migrants will pass the Congress this year. It would mark the first significant step in history to extend to agricultural workers benefits which for many years have been enjoyed by most non-agricultural workers."

"It may be that in our search for a more perfect society in a better world, we have a long way to go—beyond our own lifetime," he declared. "But our feet are on that road. We do walk that path. We seek justice for all, and an end to those sufferings we can end."

Gherman S. Titov, Russian spaceman; broadcasting from Vostok II.

"This is the Eagle speaking. The flight is going excellently. I am feeling very well."

Two encouraging announcements were made in Washington recently.

1. The State Department has dropped plans to recognize Outer Mongolia, a Communist satellite nation under the complete control of Moscow.

2. The Administration has cancelled arrangements for a direct airline route between Moscow and New York City.

There will be no tax revision bill before Congress this year.

The House Ways and Means Committee, which originates all tax-raising and tax-cutting bills has decided to put off all tax bills until next year.

The House of Representatives will soon take up legislation to set up a new program of retraining workers who are unemployed or whose jobs are in jeopardy due to automation or other changes in American industry.

I sincerely hope that a realistic and effective bill can be drawn which will be of benefit to persons needing help. Such a program makes much more sense than prolonged unemployment payments which fail to get at the real problem; the solution to which is the retraining of persons who lose their jobs to machines.

Reservists Can Enlist For 2 Years

Omaha—Headquarters of the XVI United States Army Corps has announced that enlisted Army Reservists may now volunteer for two years' active duty under certain circumstances.

Reservists below the grade of Sergeant E-5 who were released from active duty or who completed six months' active duty for training within the past three years and whose military occupational specialty (MOS) is not surplus to the Army's needs or who can qualify with a minimum of retraining in another field are eligible to apply.

Enlisted Reservists in the higher grades who meet the same release-from-active-service requirements and who hold MOS presently on the shortage list may also apply.

Higher grade enlisted men who were separated from the active service within the past three years who possess an MOS not on the critical list may volunteer provided they agree to accept an administrative reduction to pay grade E-4.

Approved applications will be returned indicating the grade and MOS in which the individual will be recalled or be eligible to enlist in the Regular Army if otherwise qualified. Those who volunteer but who do not desire to enlist in the Regular Army will be ordered to two years' active duty.

Administrative instructions regarding application procedure are being furnished to all subordinate activities of XVI Corps in the four-state area of Nebraska-Kansas-Colorado-Wyoming.

What's New? Pershing Power Pack

Fort Belvoir, Va. (ANS)—A power pack for the Army's Pershing missile system, which is scheduled to replace the Redstone in the Army's arsenal, has been developed by the Martin Company's Orlando, Fla., plant under the technical supervision of the Army Engineer Research and Development Laboratories, here.

Now under test, the power pack provides all missile utility support requirements for the Pershing, a lightweight missile which is readily transported to sites where it can be erected and fired in a matter of minutes.

The heart of the power pack is a 200 hp gas turbine engine which drives three generators, an air compressor, and an air cycle air conditioner. The entire unit weighs 3,100 pounds.

The gas turbine was designed and produced by the AIREsearch Div., The Garrett Corp., Phoenix, Ariz.

The air conditioner, also an AIREsearch standard unit, controls temperature "conditions within the missile to 1/2-degree variations. If heating is required, the same unit can furnish air up to 160 degrees F. for heating the missile when the outside temperature registers 65 degrees below zero.

The generators are General Electric standard items. The air compressor is a Cornelius unit.

Better Conditions For Farm Worker Urged by Secretary

SAN ANTONIO, Texas—"Agricultural workers are the victims of economic discrimination," Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg said in an address to a meeting of the League of Latin American Citizens in San Antonio, Texas.

"The groups who have succeeded over the years in perpetuating sub-standard labor conditions" in the agricultural industry have not done so because "they dislike Negroes or Mexicans and American Indians," the Secretary said. "They have done so, and continue to do so, because they feel it is to their economic advantage to keep costs down."

Declaring that the food growers did not create the conditions that force people to migrate or accept low wages or poor working conditions, Secretary Goldberg added:

"But neither have they sought, as an active policy for their industry, to change them."

"I believe we must strive to accomplish in agriculture what we have already accomplished in other segments of the economy—the restoration of respect and dignity, based on good wages, good working conditions, and steady employment, to the men, women, and children who labor for hire on our farms," he said.

"We must face the fact that we cannot maintain indefinitely a depressed class of agricultural wage earners for the benefit of a comparatively few agricultural employers," the Secretary went on.

"We must face the fact that the farm labor problem is an integral part of the overall farm problem. We must realize that in many cases, the availability of a surplus of agricultural workers, whether they be domestic or foreign, contributes to overproduction and hurts the competitive position of small farmers who hire little or no labor."

"The present Administration has pledged itself to improve labor conditions in agriculture," Secretary Goldberg said. "For
