Time Running Out

LINCOLN — Hunters have only a few days to harvest rails and a little more than a week to take geese, the Game Commission advises.

Gallinule and sora rail seasons close Saturday, Nov. 25. Goose hunting continues through Nov. 29 and duck season through Dec. 6.

"Vigilant law enforcement, plus awareness and indoctrination, have helped cut boating mishaps," according to Dudley Osborn, chief of boating for the Game Commission. "Still, though, too many boat owners are learning seamanship by the trial and error method."

Osborn said that greenhorn steering, motors too big for craft and failure to have life jackets in the vessel cause the mishaps. Signals and boating laws, generally unknown or ignored by the novice, are as old as sailing. Classes of instruction are free to the boater through the Coast Guard, Power Squadron, Red Cross, and the Game Commission.

"Every new boater needs to be taught," Osborn advised.

Boat Accidents Down; Record Still Unenviable
LINCOLN — Although the state's pleasure boaters enjoyed another, safer sailing in 1961, Nebraskans still tallied an unenviable record of boating fatalities and injuries.

The state recorded five boating deaths and six serious accidents in 1961, a slight improvement over the seven fatalities and six serious injuries reported last year.
