Income Tax Returns

The Internal Revenue Service has announced a timetable for installing a national network of electronic tax-checking machinery. The electronic system will be introduced into the Atlanta region first. Business type returns filed in a number of southern states are being checked by this electronic equipment beginning on January 1, 1962. Individual returns will be handled after January 1, 1963.

One example of what the machine can do is as follows: it will be able to compare the interest on the dividends which a company claims that it paid to an individual with the claims made by the individual in his return. When the machine detects something wrong on a return it will produce taped instructions for straightening out the return. These tapes will be sent back to appropriate sub-headquarters where the information will be put on punch cards. The punch cards will be used to activate printing machines which write a letter to the taxpayer.

A question which occurs to us is this: when a taxpayer receives a letter and doesn't understand it, who is going to be able to explain to the taxpayer just what the machine intended?

of the most intense character prevailed along Main Street when Sheriff Quinton and Chief Alvin Jones moved down the thoroughfare escorting four foreign-appearing men and steered them in the direction of the court house. Visions of auto loads of sparkling liquor nabbed by the officers, highway robbers and other daring criminals floated through the mind of the on-looker as the men were led toward the building wherein blinded justice presides in all her dignity. All guesses as to the cause of the "pinch," however, were wrong as the men were part of a band of "tourists" or gypsies who had made their advent in the city and sought some spot where they might park their cars and spend the night and when they stopped, the fact that their cars were without the mystic numerals that the state has set aside for auto owners, was noted by the lynx-eyed officers of the law and the male portion of the party were invited to proceed to the court house wherein Michael Tritsch deals in the auto license and to procure themselves one of the plates that would entitle them to travel the highways and give the merry laugh to those who would stop their progress. However, the hour was too late to secure the license and the party compelled to remain over night camped in the old brick yard on Washington avenue on the site of what we hope to make Hero Park. The members of the wandering Romany tribes surely have found this city one that is rough and trying as they had many experiences in the summer months attempting to sneak in and get away with a few dimes by fortune telling only to run into the strong arm of Chief Jones. However, it's a great life if you don't weaken."
