

PROJECT ADVENT SITE AT FT. DIX, N. J.—Project ADVENT is the Department of Defense research and development program to determine the feasibility of a reliable military communication system for relaying messages anywhere in the world through satellites hovering in the 22,300-mile-high stationary orbit above the equator. The 60-foot parabolic antenna reflector (insert, top left), weighing nine tons, recently was placed atop the sturdy pedestal and rotation-elevation mount (foreground at right). Standing 102-feet overall, the antenna will communicate with and track military ADVENT satellites. Sylvania Electric Products, Inc. is prime contractor of antenna development and site construction for the U. S. Army Signal Research and Development Laboratory.
