Learning from Whales

A Lockheed California company oceanograph will attach a powerful sound transmitter on the back of a gray whale in the near future. The transmitter will then give out soundings which will allow the company's oceanographer vessel, the Sea Quest, to follow the whale and receive all data sent from the sound transmitter.

The purpose is to chart the whales diving track and learn the whales' underwater habits from the recordings. This is being done not only for the pleasure which company officials would derive from such an undertaking, but also for vital data which can be used later by submariners.

It is hoped that the information will enable the Polaris submariners to learn new tricks in navigation from the habits of the gray whale. Never before has such an experiment been attempted with sea-going animals. It is hoped that if this one is successful, at a later time other animals such as sharks, swordfish, etc., will be used for the same purposes.

The ocean still remains for us a vast unexplored new area for our investigation. We are continually discovering many new forms of life and masses of living fish which were heretofore unknown.

Only last year, the Reader's Digest disclosed that great numbers of squid traveled together far beneath the ocean and were so massive that many times they would give ships false depth soundings as the ship passed over their great masses. It was also concluded that these squid had among them much larger species than were ever before known to us.

It is entirely possible that the ocean may supply answers to many of the needs of the human race in the future. It is encouraging and exciting to think of this new frontier which is still to be successfully conquered and explored. Only an out-of-space compare with the sea in anticipation and discoveries.

Down Memory Lane

50 YEARS AGO

(Rex Young recently received a 1911 Journal sent to them by a friend, Mrs. Ruffcorn. It contained some interesting advertisements and news items.)

"The Burlington will run an excursion train on Wednesday evening from Plattsmouth to Omaha. The train will make up at Plattsmouth and will leave here at 7 o'clock. Returning, it will leave Omaha at 11 o'clock. The fare will be 76 cents for the round trip. The ticket agent asks The Journal to request everyone to have the right change as the jam will be great and if time has to be taken to make change for many of the ticket buyers, some will not be able to buy tickets. Tell them to hand me half a dollar, a quarter and a cent," he said.

"Yeggmen" broke into Farmers State Bank at Wabash in Cass County and blew open the safe in a series of three explosions "which covered fully half an hour's time." It was not reported the day of this Journal what the loss was. The account said Wabash was "a small village of about 100 people." The hotelkeeper, H. T. Hinds of the Wabash House, is believed to be the only one who heard the explosions at about 2:30 a.m.—"The Burlington Shops were closed today. They will run as usual tomorrow and on Saturday there will be half a day's work for four departments. The Havelock Shops were shut down for today, tomorrow and Saturday. The company is trying to cut expenses as much as possible this month, the newspapers report."—First National Bank of Plattsmouth admonished readers: "Buried Money Is Not Safe—Put It in the Bank. We pay three per cent interest on time deposits."—Peter Claus was selling "10 cent whips at 7 cents." M. F. Manspeaker advertised a new hack service and promised "prompt attention to all calls, day or night"; August Gorder offered "IHC gasoline engines from 1 to 45 horse power for pumping, spraying, sawing, gridding, threshing and operating machines about the house and dairy." Fanger's Big Department Store had "All Wool Sweaters for Men and Boys at 95 cents to $5.75"; and Wm. Holly advertised "The New Raglan coats for $10 and $25.

"I'm taking this stuff home to catch up on my counting, Boss."

'U. S. Government Spending Could Buy Total USSR Product'

WASHINGTON — Government spending in the United States has grown so vast that in a 15-month period it would be sufficient to buy up everything that Soviet Russia produced in one year, including financing the Russian armed forces and all missile work, according to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

In 1960, federal, state, and local governments in this country spent $190 billion. The federal government alone accounted for $130 billion.

This $190 billion total equaled 80 per cent of the value of all the $230 billion in goods and services produced in all of Russia that year (the Russian Gross National Product).

The large size of government spending in this country is not generally known. For one thing, most people consider that the federal budget reveals all the federal spending. It does not. Omitted are tens of billions spent on highways, Social Security, and other programs not in-

Poison Ivy?

LINCOLN—What havoc an innocent looking twig can bring to curious members of the Game Commission.

Recently a twig was brought to the Wildlife Building for identification. It turned out to be poison ivy. At least half a dozen technicians, who handled the twig, may find themselves itching and scratching for several days.

Although dormant at this time of year, the plant is still toxic to many people.

What price curiosity? A Classified Ad in The Journal cost as little as 50 cents.
