Philip Hennings Recalls Socials of the 'Good Old Days'

By RUTH MILLER
Nehawka
Special Correspondent

"The Good Ol' Days"—how many times have you heard someone breathe those words with a sigh for times long gone? Let the cynics cry that those days were just a lot of drudgery; the memory of fine times, of happy times in the good old days linger on.

Philip Hennings of Louisville says there is one part of those days he would like to go back to and that is the social life. In those days everybody in the neighborhood went to every party, from the lifestup. The babies would be taken into a room near where mother could keep half an eye on them between sets of a square dance.

The older kids watch the excitement as long as the Sandman would let them and then they would drop off to sleep in the nearest out of the way corner until the last note was drawn from the fiddle and the last tired feet shuffled through the dance and then they would bundle up and go home in the buggies through the clear, crisp starlit night.

One of the chief social events of course was a wedding—and oh! those German weddings!—where there was enough food to feed hundreds, and often there were hundreds to feed.

Mr. Hennings told about his sister Maggie's wedding when 300 people attended the open house and the Hennings never slacked their efforts to "feed them all."

Poppies to Bloom Here Saturday

Orbiting over Plattsmouth Saturday, May 5, will be many American Legion Auxiliary and Junior Auxiliary volunteers with loads of little red crepe paper poppies.

These poppies will be replicas of the famous blossoms which bloomed "between the crosses, row on row" that marked our heroes' graves in Flanders Fields.

They are the official memorial flower of the American Legion and Auxiliary and are worn on Poppy Day each year as personal tribute to the nation's war dead.

These poppies have been blooming in abundance during the winter and spring in Veterans hospitals on beds and tables as they were made by disabled veterans. Now they are ready to bloom on the lapel of every citizen in Plattsmouth. A poppy over every remembering heart.

Crippled hands have made poppies carefully and painstakingly touch has guided the fingers of other poppy makers.

The stipend earned by the veterans making memorial poppies is often times the only earnings possible during long hospitalization.

Wearing a poppy tells the world that we remember and are grateful to those who made it possible for us to live in an America where God is known and worshipped; where family life is sacred and where you and I can share the duties and privileges of helping maintain the myriad of blessings we hold dear.

BUDDIES—Jimmy Short, right, and Steve Baburek pose with a new pal, one for whose affections they have not had to battle a great crowd of co-admirers. The snake wraps around Jimmy fondly every day when raw hamburger feeding time arrives at the Short home, 907 Avenue D. Said Jimmy's mother, Mrs. James Short, without envy, "To each his own taste."
