Governor Seeks Spirited Bidding in State Buying

BY MELVIN PAUL
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN — The state would like to see more bidders toss their quotations into the ring for goods and equipment it wants to buy.

Gov. Frank Morrison says the more competition the state attracts in bidding, the better off it is.

He and State Purchasing Agent Leo Beck Sr. also agree that Nebraska should not have a percentage tolerance which would favor firms located in the state.

Such a practice, the governor said, would be contrary to the historical position of the Legislature.

Beck added that the state does not have enough industry as yet to warrant a favoritism clause for Nebraska bidders.

The comments came after Morrison and Beck distributed to newsmen a new 22-page booklet on purchasing purposes, procedures, rules and regulations and laws.

A public hearing was held on the rules April 18 at which time there were no objections voiced to them.

Since he took office, the governor said, the state has enlarged the area of competitive bidding and moved in the direction of buying in larger quantities.

Beck said revised rules cannot be finally completed until his office gets together with the Legislature. A legislative committee has been studying buying procedures for some months.

Motor Tax Law
A tax law passed by the 1961 Legislature has been ruled unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court.

The law would have permitted dealers in motor vehicles to receive credit on their tax assessments for the period in which vehicles were sold between Jan. 1 and July 1.

The High Court said the law is unconstitutional because it amounts to releasing motor vehicle dealers from a proportionate share of the overall tax burden.

A Constitutional amendment passed in 1952 authorized the Legislature to provide a different method of taxing motor vehicles but it did not permit a different method of taxing motor vehicle dealers, the court said.

Gov. Frank Morrison declined to sign the bill after it passed the Legislature and the measure became effective without the governor's approval.

The State Resources Division, charged with attracting new industry to Nebraska, has a new assistant director.

Peace Corps

Nebraska's agriculture director, Pearle Finigan, has been asked to aid Peace Corps Director R. Sargent Shriver in recruiting people in farm and rural areas for service.

Shriver told Finigan that countries in Africa, Latin America and Asia have requested the let on purchasing purposes, procedures, rules and regulations and laws.

The thousand volunteers would help improve agricultural techniques in newly developing areas.

All expenses, including transportation, housing, clothing food, medical care, vacations and incidentals are provided by the Peace Corps. After they complete their two-year assignment each Peace Corps volunteer gets $75 for each month of service.

"Nebraska and other midwest states should be fertile ground for recruitment of volunteers with farming experience," Finigan said. "It is in this area that farm production has excelled giving evidence of the capability of the rural population."

Finigan said the corps prefers those with actual farming experience.

Interstate Lakes
There will be five lakes suitable for recreation purposes built in the Platte River Valley between Kearney and Elm Creek as part of the Interstate Highway construction.

That's the word from the State Highway Department.

The department said the lakes would continue a series of recreation areas being developed from Grand Island west in connection with construction of the Interstate.

Measles
There was a word of cheer this week for parents.

The State Health Department said there has been a very sharp decrease in the number of cases of measles reported. The total is 47 so far this year as against 440 in a comparable period last year.

It all happens so quickly, it is sometimes hard to say if a French government fell or was caught in a revolving door.—The Richmond Times-Dispatch.
