In spite of Julie's aid, he lost his balance.

"Mr. Lockwood, are you hurt?" cried Julie. Anxiously she helped him to his feet, and across the street they hurried. "Mr. Lockwood, are you hurt?" again came the question as they reached shelter from the storm. She didn't need an answer when she spied his limping foot as he leaned heavily on his cane.

"I think it's only a sprain," came the reply.

"We'd better get you to a doctor," Julie said, half to herself. Then she spoke again. "Look, here's a taxi. Come on."

Twenty minutes later both Julie and Mr. Lockwood, with his bandaged ankle, were riding home with Julie's mother from the doctor's office, from where Julie had telephoned her. Despite Mr. Lockwood's protest about not wanting to intrude, Julie's plump, friendly mother insisted that slippery streets were no place for a man with a sprained ankle.

A sudden thought flashed across Julie's mind. Her paintings! Where were they? With a sinking heart she remembered. She had dropped them on the corner when Mr. Lockwood fell. As far as she knew, they were probably still there. There was no use in going back to get them now. Because of the rain, they would be reduced to nothing but a soggy mess.

After a delicious supper, Mr. Lockwood asked if he could use the telephone. Then he and Father went into the living room to visit.

"Julie, have you seen my new color book lately?" her little six-year-old sister, Kit, demanded.

"No," came the reply. "Maybe you left it in my room after you showed it to me this afternoon. I'll go see."

Yes, on her bedroom desk lay a brown paper sack. But to her surprise, in place of a color book in it, she saw a set of water color paintings!

"Where's my color book?" demanded Kit.

With rising spirits Julie replied, "You must have left it in my room this afternoon. And when I went to take my painting, I must have snatched the wrong sack." Seeing Kit's disappointment, Julie smiled and added, "Don't worry, Kit, I'll buy you a new one. You run along now."

Well Julie had her paintings, but it was too late now to enter them.

The next morning Julie stepped out into a fresh, bright, summer morning that promised to dry the wet earth.

"Hi, Julie," came a voice from nearby. It was Timothy Trumbler, the fifteen-year-old, next door neighbor. "Are you still planning to get a purple ribbon on those paintings of yours?" he teased.

"I didn't get them entered in time," Julie said forlornly.

"That's too bad," Tim murmured sympathetically. Then his expression changed to a thoughtful frown. "Maybe you could still enter them. Mother was down at the hall arranging the entries last evening, you know. She said that later in the evening they received a telephone call from the one who's supposed to judge the contest, saying that he couldn't come until morning. So perhaps it's possible that you could still enter them."

"Do you mean that?" squealed Julie.

"I wouldn't have said it if I didn't."

Returning quickly with the paintings, Julie cried excitedly, "Let's go!"

Julie breathed a deep sigh of relief. At last her pictures were entered.

"I wonder what you'd do without me," Tim began teasing again.

Paying little attention to this last remark, Julie suddenly asked, "Who will judge the paintings?"

"It's an old fellow named Lockwood. He hurt his ankle or something, and that's why he couldn't come last night."

"Lockwood?" echoed Julie in surprise.

"Yes, a man named C. Lockwood. He's an artist himself." Then he added, "You'd like him, Julie. Perhaps you'll get an opportunity to meet him."

"Yes, Julie murmured with a little smile, "Yes, maybe I will."

Potato Flakelets

LINCOLN — Potato flakelets eliminate some shipping costs and bulky packaging. A much denser dehydrated mashed potato product developed by the Agricultural Research Service Laboratory near Philadelphia requires only a third to a half as much storage and shipping space as potato flakes. Flakelets are reconstituted into mashed potatoes just as easily and quickly as flakes, and with the same good flavor and texture.

Flakes, which have been produced commercially for the past 5 years are produced by 12 American plants with a total capacity of 65 million pounds. Flakelets were developed specifically for the military services, hotels, restaurants and other institutional users. Some flake manufacturers plan to produce flakelets.

'Denier' and 'Gauge' Defined

Lincoln — Women shoppers often are confused by terms "denier" and "gauge" when buying hose. For this reason, hosiery is often sold as evening sheers, daytime sheer, business, walking service weight or super service weight. These terms provide an easy guide for the shopper in terms of individual needs.

According to Gerda Petersen, Extension clothing specialist at the University of Nebraska, denier refers to the weight and thickness of each thread of nylon yarn. The numbers vary from 7 to 80. The lower the denier number, the thinner the yarn, making the stocking more sheer.

Gauge refers to the number of stitches in an inch and one-half width. Gauge is used in full-fashioned hose and varies between 51 and 75. The higher gauge gives more stretch. Needle count is used in seamless hosiery and is similar to gauge.

RETURNS $1,400

Meade, Kans. — Receiving $1,400 at a cattle sale, Quinby Demmitt put the money in his wallet, which he lost a few hours later.

The wallet was found but it was empty.

A traveling salesman recently returned the money. Demmitt received an envelope containing $1,400 in cash.

County Physicians Frown On Mass Oral Vaccination

There will be no mass polio inoculation for Plattsburgh, at least for the present.

Monday night, Dr. R. F. Brendel, city physician, told the City Council the Cass County Medical Society had passed a resolution that no county doctor participate in any mass inoculation.

Principle reasons the doctors voted not to participate in a mass program of administering oral polio vaccine, Dr. Brendel said, are: Such mass programs do not give the doctor control over the individual patient and are not considered good medical practice, the State Medical Society in the past has been op-

Nebraska City Youth, 18, Killed Near Platte Bridge

Robert L. Eaton, 18, Nebraska City, early this morning was killed in the collision of his car and a truck just south of the Platte River Bridge.

The youth was killed instantly but a passenger escaped without serious injury when his car was struck by a truck loaded with nearly 16 tons of water pipe.

Sheriff Tom Solomon who investigated said young Eaton was driving south and had just left the bridge when he began a left turn at the intersection.

At that instant, the truck, driven by Jon P. Jess, 34, Fargo, N. D., began to pass the car. The truck's right front end caught the left door of the car and carried the car sideways about 300 feet down the highway. The impact occurred 134 feet south of the end of the bridge, the Sheriff said.

County Attorney James Begley who investigated along with the Sheriff said no charge would be filed in connection with the accident.

Young Eaton's passenger Sandra Curtis, 15, of Plattsburgh was taken to an Omaha hospital for checkup, then released. Authorities said she evidently had no serious injury.

The youth's body was taken to Caldwell Funeral Home where services will be held (story on Page One).

The truck was heavily damaged. The car was totally wrecked.

Elmwood

Calendar: June 5—Eastern Star; PNG June 7—Browns and Girl Scouts, June 7.

Mrs. Lucy Schafer Dies in Wyoming

NEHAWKA (Special) — Friends here received word of the death of Mrs. Max (Lucy) Schafer at Lander, Wyo. Funeral services were held at Lander May 23.

The Schafer family lived at Nehawka for some time. Mr. Schafer died in 1955. He taught manual training to the Indian boys at Ethete at St. Michael's Indian Mission. Their son-in-law, Rev. C. E. Wilson also taught at the Mission and later became an Episcopal minister.

Survivors are a son, Joe, a project engineer at Pittsburg University; a daughter, Mrs. C. E. Wilson of Peble Beach, Calif.; Mrs. Gertrude Luckert, Rapid City, S. D.; Dick Schafer, executive secretary of the Wyoming high school athletic activities association at Cheyenne.

Rev. Wilson assisted with the services at Trinity Episcopal church at Lander.

Mrs. Schafer was born Nov. 11, 1886, in Kansas. She moved to Lander following the death of her husband.

Canning Is Still Popular in Farm And City Homes

LINCOLN — Has canning disappeared along with the fruit cellar? On the contrary, the kitchen shelf lined with gleaming jars of home canned food is by no means a thing of the past.

Mrs. Clara Leopold, home management specialist at the University of Nebraska, says that 90 per cent of the farm families and 80 per cent of the city families do some home canning. Home freezing is done by 60 per cent of the farm families and 10 per cent of the city families.

According to Mrs. Leopold, if economy is the main reason for home food preservation, canning saves more money but freezing requires less labor.

Mrs. Frank Lorenz has returned to her own home where she plans to spend the summer. She had spent the winter with Mr. and Mrs. Fay Chambers of McClelland, Iowa.

At the Herold Krecklow home, a party was held for their son David who was one of the graduates. Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Hoover, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McFadden all of Lincoln, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wiles of Weeping Water, Mr. and Mrs. Arlo Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Eveland, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Buell, Mrs. Howard Pool, George and Linda, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Krecklow and Darlene Lyle.

Mr. and Mrs. Arlo Pratt entertained the Munn family reunion. All attended the memorial services at Cowles Hill church and cemetery first.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Plymouth of Millard called on the Krecklows Sunday evening.

Large Audience Pays Tribute To Nation's 'Obscure Heroes'

One of the biggest crowds in recent years turned out at Oak Hill Cemetery here Wednesday to pay tribute to the nation's and the community's war dead on Memorial Day.

They saw a ceremony of commemoration in which representatives of local service organizations took part and heard an address by the Rev. Fr. John Allen, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church.

He said the gathering had come to honor some "obscure men" whose contribution to the life of the nation was tremendous.

"These were merciful men, whose righteousness hath not been forgotten," he said in quoting the writing of Ben Sirach in Ecclesiastes.

He said America is built like the Egyptian pyramids, "each generation building on the foundation laid by the previous one."

Such "building" includes the work of those who fought to keep this country free from foreign power, Rev. Allen said.

He likened Memorial Day to the religious celebration, All Saints Day.

As the Saints are honored for their virtuous and Godly lives, so the nation's war dead are honored because of "their unwavering allegiance and loyalty to this land which Almighty God has given us," he said.

He warned his audience to be ever alert to threats to their freedoms and urged everyone to take an interest in government of their city, state and nation.

The Auxiliary received The National Legislative Bulletin for 1961-1962 membership.

Violet Attebery reported on the luncheon and bazaar.

Homemaking 'Whys'

Question: Does it cost more to feed a teenage boy?

Answer: Yes, generally speaking! Teenage boys gobble up more of the weekly food money than any other member of the family. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service, the estimated cost of a week's food supply for one growing male, age 16 to 19, in January 1962 was $8.20. This was a low-cost plan. If the family followed a "moderate" cost plan, his food bill would have been $11.20, and on a liberal plan, $12.60.

Question: Can you afford to eat?

Answer: Quite simply you can't afford not to and food takes a smaller amount of our total income each year. Americans nowadays get more food for less work than ever before in history, according to a study by the U. S. Department of Economic Research.

A decade ago an hour of factory work bought 2 1/3 pounds of chuck roast, 20 eggs or 6 1/2 quarts of milk. Today an hour buys 3 1/2 pounds of roast, 42 eggs, or more than 8 quarts of milk.

In dollars and cents the bill is higher — by 20 cents — than it was in the index years of 1947-49. But the food bill is now only 20 per cent of our take-home pay compared to 26 per cent 15 years ago.

Corn Aplenty in Supermarket Items

LINCOLN — There's plenty of corn these days, and a lot of it's found in the supermarket! Residents of the state should appreciate the use of corn and its byproducts in the foods we eat, say University of Nebraska specialists.

Corn in one form or another was found in 197 different foods at a supermarket in Alexandria, Virginia. During an aisle-by-aisle check of food labels, corn was included as an ingredient in foods ranging from Worcestershire sauce to bird biscuits. Many standardized foods require no ingredient declarations on the label, therefore, the list was somewhat smaller than actual usage would show.

Cornstarch, Syrup and dextrose are used in some 50 foods and in many cases two of the three are used in combination. Other foods contain kernels, corn flour, corn meal, corn oil, lactic acid and other byproducts.

NEHAWKA

Mr. and Mrs. John Steffens of Lincoln and Mrs. Eva Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. David Wheeler of Pasadena, Calif. called at the Albert Anderson home Wednesday. Misses, Tucker, Wheeler and Anderson called at the Frank Lemon, Julian Pollard and Lottie Stone and Arthur Wolph homes.

Several from Nehawka took part in the Memorial services Sunday at the Wyoming Methodist church, Beverly Balfour read Lincoln's Gettysburg address; Bruce Madson read General Logan's orders; Tom Easter sang, accompanied by Miss Amelia Peterson of Nebraska City. Maurfee Jay gave the address. Mrs. Ralph Hobbie of Nebraska City was program chairman and Mrs. Allen Madsen the accompanist. Mr. and Mrs. Kent Balfour and family, Mrs. Amelia Balfour, Mrs. Helen Peterson attended the service. The Ralph Hobbie family were dinner guests at the Kent Balfour home.

Harley Kearney is spending several days with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Crawford of Union.

Mr. and Mrs. Art Zech, Julie and David of Douglas were dinner guests Friday at the F. O. Sund home.

Greenwood

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Rouse and Mrs. Mildred Comstock attended graduation at the Louisville High Auditorium Friday evening. Miss Nancy Johnson was one of the graduates and was the recipient of Regents Scholarship and also salutatorian. They attended a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Johnson afterward. Mrs. Johnson is a cousin of Mrs. Comstock and Mrs. Rouse.
