

3rd No-Hitter Gives Plattsmouth 5-0 Mark

Plattsmouth's third no-hitter of the Cass County Boys Baseball League season and the second straight for Pitcher Dick Spangler lifted the local club to a 5-0 league record Thursday night with a 1-0 win at Elmwood.

The game went an extra frame as Elmwood's Dreamer matched Spangler pitch for pitch until Dick Church doubled in the first of the sixth and scored when an outfielder let the ball go past him.

It was on the third hit of the game for Plattsmouth. Spangler struck out 13 and there were only four Elmwood baserunners, one on an error and three on walks.

Dreamer struck out three, walked three and had Plattsmouth cutting at a variety of slow stuff.

Spangler's no-hitter brought the Plattsmouth pitching staff's record to two hits allowed in five games. Besides Spangler's two no-hitters, Jim Wuelling has a no-hitter and two one-hitters to his credit.

Next for Plattsmouth is a 6 p.m. game at Murdock Tuesday.

Special Study Being Made of State Pheasants

LINCOLN—A special pheasant study is being conducted this summer on the Sacramento-Wilcox game-management area on the abandonment of pheasant nests, reports M. O. Steen, Game Commission director.

Abandoned nests are frequently found by farmers and cause great concern and speculation by the public. Previous research has proven that the eggs in these nests are fertile and capable of hatching. These nests may be quite important in understanding pheasant populations.

Ray Linder will investigate the cause of nest abandonment. For the last two years, Linder taught at South Dakota State College. Before accepting the teaching position, he headed the Commission's program of research on game birds.

Commission Director Steen said the abandonment may be prompted by the presence of pheasant chicks. One hen may abandon her nest when another hen and her chicks come on the scene. This research could have far-reaching effects for the sportsman because this factor could impose the upper limit on pheasant populations by stopping the production of chicks.

Research of this type has not been attempted before as far as management is concerned, Steen said.

In this study, Linder will look for birds nesting in the field and then erect a low pen around the nest. After making certain the hen has not been disturbed, two or three chicks will be put in the pen.

Preliminary studies have shown that the sight of the contact with these chicks may cause the hen to stop incubating. This action is due to the hormone influence.

If this type of nest abandonment occurs in the wild, Steen continued, it indicates an overcrowding of available nesting cover. Such knowledge may lead to improved populations through management, and surplus hens could be made available to the hunter in the future.

Write Park Supt. To Reserve Cabin

LINCOLN—Wonder where to write for cabin reservations? Hoping for a prompt reply? All persons answering "yes" to the above questions should send their letters directly to the park superintendent at the area they wish to stay, according to the Game Commission.

The five state areas which have cabins are Chadron, Fort Robinson State Park, Ponca, and Victoria Springs. The respective park superintendents and their addresses are:

Victor Leonard, Chadron State Park, Chadron; John Kurtz, Fort Robinson State Park, Crawford; Vincent Rotherham, Niobrara State Park, Niobrara; Dallas Johnson, Ponca State Park, Ponca; and John Schulerberg, Victoria Springs State Recreation Area, Anselmo.

GIRL BORROWS BABY

Nutley, N. J. — Five-year-old Elizabeth Lardier brought a baby home and would not tell where she had gotten the infant. Police solved the mystery when they found an empty baby carriage about a block away.

Elizabeth explained: "I just wanted my mommy to have a baby."

Nehawka Twister

NEHAWKA (Special)—A high twister Tuesday afternoon destroyed tree tops near the Elmer Stoll home. Some damage was done to the house by a large tree which fell.

There was a heavy rain and some hail which followed.

An oriole's nest with several young birds which hung on the tree near the house, was found by Mrs. Stoll. She tied it to another tree nearby and the older birds found it and continued feeding the little birds.

Two men who were working near the Stoll home and Stoll, who was in the field took refuge under a combine when the twister passed. Mrs. Stoll was alone in the house. The doors to the west and south were blocked.
