Christ Lutheran Represented at Conventions
Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hansen of Plattsmouth, Mrs. Emma Norvell of Auburn and Christ Lutheran Church Pastor A. B. Lentz and Mrs. Lentz attended the convention of the new Lutheran Church in America which held its closing meetings in Cobo Hall June 25-28. He was also a delegate to the constituting convention of the new "Lutheran Church in America" which met from June 28 to July 1 in Cobo Hall.
Dr. Lentz was a delegate at large to the constituting convention, appointed by Dr. Franklin C. Fry.
The new "Lutheran Church in America" is a merger of the Danish Lutheran Church, the Finnish Lutheran Church, the Swedish Lutheran Church (usually called Augustana) and the United Lutheran Church in America, making it the largest Lutheran Church body in the U.S.
There are now three large Lutheran bodies in the U.S., the Lutheran Church in America, the American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod. They make up the largest Protestant Church body in the U.S., Dr. Lentz said.
The Constituting Convention was opened with Communion services in the Arena of Cobo Hall in which 6,000 were communed in 45 minutes.
Dr. Franklin Clark Fry was elected president of the new body. He had been President of the United Lutheran Church, President of the Lutheran World Federation that is of the 70,000,000 Lutherans in the world, and first vice president and executive officer of National Council of Christian Churches, Dr. Malvin Lundeen, former president of the Augustana Lutheran church, was elected secretary; Edmund H. Wagner, former treasurer of the United Lutheran Church, was elected treasurer.
The travelers, who made their lodgings in Windsor, Canada during the conventions, were "deeply impressed by the conventions and the new church and returned home wearied but thrilled by the events which will remain a happy memory," Dr. Lentz said.

Clean Tile
LINCOLN — If ceramic tile in showers becomes spotted by hardwater chemicals, clean with part vinegar and part water. According to Mrs. Clara Leopold, Extension home management specialist at the University of Nebraska, the solution will dissolve accumulated lime deposits. In an effort to discourage spotting, encourage family members to wipe tile with a towel after taking a shower.

Eradication of TB in Next Generation Forecast

Complete eradication of tuberculosis in the state of Nebraska is possible within the next generation.
169 delegates from 45 counties attending the 55th Annual Meeting of the Nebraska Tuberculosis Association in Lincoln last week, were told this goal can be achieved through intensive tuberculin testing of pre-school children.
Dr. David J. Sencer, Assistant Chief, Communicable Disease Center, U. S. Public Health Service, Atlanta, Georgia, told the group that the level of TB control in Nebraska is among the best in the nation.
"Now it is up to you to eradicate it," he said.
"This means ripping it out by the roots. It is not going to be easy."
Dr. Sencer stated that by tuberculin testing the pre-school children, it would be possible to trace the source of TB infection, and find out how the child became infected.
"Can we, as TB workers," Dr. Sencer stated, "within the next five years perfect the program so that we can guarantee no child entering school has a positive skin test? Can we provide him with a school which is free of tuberculosis? If we do this, we can raise a generation of children who will never have tuberculosis."
Dr. E. A. Rogers, Lincoln, Director of the Nebraska State Department of Health, told the group:
"Any county will do well to make long range plans for tuberculin testing. Many have time programs now."
Dr. C. A. Medlar, Columbus, Case Finding Chairman of the Platte County TB Committee, and Dr. T. R. Pfundt, Omaha, Chairman, Department of Pediatrics, Creighton University School of Medicine, reported on tuberculin testing of children, using the new technique, called the Tine, compared with the standard Mantoux method.
Dr. Rogers, commenting on use of the two tests said, "It would be well to do the Tine in other communities only when it is measured against the accepted Mantoux, if the doctors are interested in doing the two tests side by side. The Mantoux test will be the standard for some time to come."

Army Moths Are Depositing Eggs
LINCOLN — The Armyworm moth is using guerrilla tactics to plan the strategy for this year's attack on corn.
The moths are depositing eggs in concealing rank vegetation such as lodged grain or grass, according to Bob Roselle, University of Nebraska Extension entomologist. When these eggs hatch the larvae, which are camouflaged in a greenish-brown color with longitudinal stripes, will begin to infest the corn plants.
Hiding by day and attacking by night, these worms often have damaged the corn and are moving to adjacent fields before they are observed.
For security against infestations use sprays or poison bran baits. Contact your County Extension Office for details on control measures.

Corn Rootworm General Now

LINCOLN — Moderate to severe infestation of corn rootworms are now present throughout Nebraska and rootworm resistance to aldrin and heptachlor is appearing in all corn producing areas of the State, University of Nebraska entomologists report.
However, fields that were treated with diazinon appear to be in good condition. Only a few rootworms have been found in such fields. Diazinon is the chemical recommended by University entomologists for use where rootworms have developed resistance to the commonly used insecticides aldrin and heptachlor.
Corn rootworm development is well ahead of a year ago at this time. Adult western corn rootworms have been found in southeastern and central Nebraska.
While no rootworm resistance to aldrin or heptachlor has been reported in the Scottsbluff area, farmers in that part of the State should watch corn closely for any evidence of rootworm attack which may show up first as wilting of the leaves.
"Contrary to some reports, we are not recommending applications of granules with air or ground equipment at this time," says Robert E. Roselle, University Extension entomologist.
