COLLEGE FRESHMAN AT 13

Los Angeles—A college freshman at 13, Lance Kerr says he probably won't be able to make an A average after he reviewed his grades in anthropology, physics, math and Russian. But he thinks he will make a strong B.

Lance doesn't like to be called a child prodigy or a genius. The impression he gives is that of a normal, intelligent person—with something wrong about his age.

Last semester he took fourteen units and made an A and B average with only one C.
