CAPITOL CORNER

Congressman
GLENN CUNNINGHAM

Washington, D.C. (Special)—Farm "experts" in the Federal Government were surprised by the rejection of Federal controls in the turkey industry by the turkey growers themselves.

A recent referendum showed less than half the turkey growers favored controls as proposed by the Department of Agriculture. A two-thirds vote was required before such controls could be put into effect, and it is no secret that Department officials thought two-thirds of the farmers would vote for the Department's program.

Of 7,000 producers voting all across the country, only 43 per cent supported the marketing order.

Hearings start this week by a House Space Subcommittee on the use of women as astronauts.

There are 12 women under tentative consideration for future space flights. They have so far passed the same rigid physical and psychological tests given our present astronauts.

I regret the necessity to have to turn down many invitations this summer to attend meetings and other events in Nebraska. This session of Congress is expected to last into September, and my place—as your Representative—is on the floor of the House while it is in session.

I have a record of over 97 per cent attendance during my six years in Congress, and I hope to keep it that high.

I will try to get back home whenever I can this summer—over weekends and whenever the leadership recesses long enough for a trip to Nebraska.

Russian tourists are now free to gamble in Las Vegas, swim off Palm Beach and visit almost anywhere in this country.

The State Department has lifted all travel restrictions on Communist visitors and exchange students.

The State Department hopes Russia will now relax its strict restrictions on American travel in that country. So far, Russia has not offered such relaxations.

PLEA SAVES CHILD

Grand Haven, Mich.—Hearing a childish voice say, "Dear God, get me out of here," directed Henry Vanderwall to a small boy huddled under a tree, cold but alive.

Thomas Richardson, 5, had been missing 19 hours in a swampy woods where 400 volunteers had been searching.

Searchers said that if the boy had not made this plea to God he might never have been found in the thick woods.

town, having moved from the Wenzel place.

500 Sets of Tail Feathers Tell Goose Story

LINCOLN—More than 500 sets of goose tail feathers were received by the game division of the Game Commission from last year's waterfowl hunters.

Sportsmen were asked to identify the tail feathers and the date the goose was taken. According to the Commission, only 3.2 per cent of the geese were incorrectly identified.

"We learned something about your ability to identify geese," L. P. Vance, chief of game, said in a letter to the goose hunters. "We've known for some time that some of us have a little trouble with ducks, but this project proved that most of us know our geese."

More than half of the tail feathers were from Canada geese. The remaining feathers included 92 whitefronts, 83 snows, and 58 blues.

The tail feathers gave the Commission a means of aging geese taken by Nebraska hunters. This information and that from other sources showed that 1961 was a very poor year for reproduction for all geese. None of the geese produced well enough to sustain a kill as high as that in the Central flying during the 1961 season.

Conditions on the breeding grounds of Canada were reported to be somewhat improved this spring, but time is required to find what the reproduction will be and what to expect on the fall flight.
