'Spare Look'
Forecast for Fall Fashions
LINCOLN—Despite the flurry of ruffles this summer, the big compelling "look" in clothes for fall will be the "spare look." University of Nebraska Clothing specialists call this the lean, stripped down, elegant clothes appearance—at every price level. There is still a trend to bring clothes closer to the body—through seaming, bias cutting or draping fabrics. Basically, the simple collarless or plunging necklines, the uncluttered body lines, the dependence on line, cut and fabric, afford exciting possibilities for "elegant" jewelry.

Crossbreeding lovebirds may lead to frustration. African lovebirds cut bark or paper into strips as nest lining. The peach-faced variety carries the strips tucked snugly under feathers; others use their bills. When the species are crossbred, the hybrids inherit the urge to tuck the strips but not the ability to hold on to them. Hence bafflement.
