GLENN CUNNINGHAM

Washington, D. C. (Special)—The United States Mint really does "make" money—it not only manufactures coins but realizes a profit in doing so.

There are three Mints in the United States which manufacture coins. These are located at Denver, Philadelphia and San Francisco, and in the year ending July 1, 1962, these three Mints manufactured a total of 2,544,667,200 one-cent coins, having a face value of $25,446,672. Cost of metal used in the coins was approximately $1,750,000 and manufacturing costs amounted to approximately $1,750,000—total cost, $7,075,000. Thus the profit to the Government from the manufacture of one-cent coins during the year amounted to more than $18,000,000.

A breakdown shows that it costs 29¢ to make a hundred pennies, it makes 71¢ profit.

Most Government agencies do not make money—they spend it. This includes the United States Congress. An example is a report just published by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House of Representatives. This report, entitled, "A Study of Mutual Funds," was prepared by the Wharton School of Finance, which received a fee of $95,700 for their efforts. This might not seem so bad if the study and report had some value. However, the research on mutual fund operations covered the period from 1953 to 1958, which is ancient history so far as the stock market is concerned. And the questions of small investors or anyone else who might want advice on mutual fund investments are not answered in this 600-page maze of outdated statistics and generalities. Another $95,700 down the drain it would appear.

One of the most beautiful tourist attractions in Washington is the Jefferson Memorial located on the banks of the Potomac River. The monument is dedicated to Thomas Jefferson, who is credited with the drafting of the Declaration of Independence. He was the third President of the United States and the founder of the Democratic Party. Following are some statements by Jefferson:

"I place economy among the first and most important virtues, and public debt as the greatest danger to be feared."

"That government is best which governs least."

"When all government, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington, as the center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided by one government on another and will become as venal and oppressive as the government from which we separated."

Attitude Half The Battle . . .

LINCOLN—Even children who have been looking forward to starting school sometimes have a few last minute misgivings, say family life specialists at the University of Nebraska.

Encourage your child to talk about school. Answer his or her questions. You can give him a preview of school by visiting the classrooms. (This can be done easily when the child is registered.) Refer to the principal as the friendly person he is certain to be.

Also, expose your child to situations where "mother" isn't always around. Let him visit grandmother or take a jaunt to the zoo with a friend's parents. He also should be encouraged to take part in group play, assume responsibility and follow simple directions.

Another good idea, to help your child, is to get to know the teacher before school starts or right after. Arrange a private meeting with her at the school or invite her to your home. Such meetings are best when junior is NOT around. Parents should also take an active interest and participate in parent-teacher organizations. These unite school, family and community and lead toward better understanding.

lesinger, Jr., White House Assistant, speech writer and advisor to the President, and a former Harvard history professor, had this to say about Jefferson:

"Jefferson is today remote and irrelevant. . . a figure not of present concern but of historical curiosity. Had the United States responded to his ideology we would be today a feeble and impotent nation."

Thus far, I have heard of no suggestions that we dedicate a monument to Mr. Schlesinger!

KISSING BAN LIFTED

Manila — Filipinos, avid fans of Hollywood-made movies, are now allowed to see their own movie stars kissing on film.

Previously, the censors sanctioned kisses only in imported movies. Kissing in public was considered permissible behavior in the U. S. but not in the Philippines.

The censors decided the time has come to let Filipino actors kiss, so long as the clinches aren't too passionate.
