USDA To Make Corn Sales against '62 Feed Grain Program Certificates

The U. S. Department of Agriculture today announced that Commodity Credit Corporation-owned corn representing payment-in-kind certificates earned by producers for diverting acreage under the 1962 Feed Grain Program will now be made available for purchase as justified by market conditions, and at market prices but not below the levels which prevailed generally at harvest time in 1960 and 1961.

These offerings, along with the new crop and carry-in stocks, "will ensure ample supplies for all needs and reasonable price stability for feed

Rummage Sale
EAGLE (Special) — The WSCS had a "successful" rummage sale at Lincoln Monday. Many articles were contributed and many helped work at the sale.

users and consumers. Proceeds from the sales will carry out the intent of the feed grain law to finance the adjustment programs insofar as practical through payments in kind from CCC holdings," USDA said.

The 1962-63 CCC corn sales program is "designed to result in a seasonal movement of feed grain prices relative to the harvest-time price, similar to those of recent years, and to carry out other objectives announced in the fall of 1961."

Within the next few days leading orders will be issued to move CCC corn from country to terminal position in such quantities as are needed to supply current export demand. Meanwhile, moderate sales of grain sorghum against certificates are continuing at market prices. During the July 1-Sept. 28 period, these sales amounted to about 44 million bushels.

The 1961 and 1962 Feed Grain Programs provided for payment-in-kind from grain in CCC inventory to participating producers for devoting feed grain acreage to conserving uses. Provision also is made for producers to be issued cashable sight drafts, and for the CCC to act as their agents in marketing the payment-in-kind grain. The majority of program cooperators again this year elected the option of receiving sight drafts, which accounts for the certificate pool sales operation now being conducted by CCC.
