No. 12976

On reading the petition, duly verified, of Arnold E. Schliefert, guardian of the estate of Leona M. Schliefert, incompetent, filed herein for license to sell the following described real estate, to-wit:

An undivided one-third (1/3) of the property described as Lot 129 and the South two feet (2') of Lot 130 in the Village of Louisville, Cass County, Nebraska, it appearing from said petition that the cash and personal property in the hands of said guardian and belonging unto said incompetent and the income from said real estate from said incompetent, are insufficient to maintain said incompetent, and to pay the debts and expenses of administering the estate of said incompetent and the taxes against said real estate, and that it would be for the benefit of said ward if said real estate be sold and the proceeds thereof put out at interest.

COMMENT

by L. A. Caldwell
Hallowe'en

All Hallowe'en Evenings, the night before All Saints' Day, was once believed to be a time when witches and ghosts were most likely to be out, wandering in the night. That's why they are still likely to be found abroad this October 31st... witches and goblins, pirates and skeletons... all a bit on the small side these days.

The trouble with some of our ancestors of a few centuries ago was that they took witches seriously... condemning innocent people on superstition and unsupported accusations. The term "witch hunt" comes down from that time, with the meaning of wildly accusing someone without evidence, or trying to find a scapegoat for a crime that never happened.

Witches and broomsticks are fun for the small fry on Hallowe'en. It's up to us adults to make sure that we don't start thinking they're abroad through the rest of the year, so our young goblins can grow up in a world where witch hunts are permanently out of style.
