The bride chose a street-length frock designed in taffeta and re-embroidered lace. The bodice of lace featured a modified sweetheart neckline and the gown had bracelet-length sleeves. A lace panel fashioned the wattleau back of the belted taffeta skirt.

Pearl edged petals of lace fashioned a flower which caught the bride's bouffant veil of English bridal illusion. She wore a corsage of white carnation and baby roses.

The service was read by the Rev. William Davis.

The couple lives on a farm near Elmwood.

COMMENT

by L. A. Caldwell
The Good Old Days

New years come and old years go. And often the old year looks better in retrospect than it did at the time. That's why, as we get older, we tend to look back fondly on the "good old days," and to find fault with the present age in comparison. Anything "old fashioned" comes to seem sounder, somehow better.

Maybe that's true in many things. But there are some old fashioned features that we ought to recall. Take old fashioned kerosene lamps, for instance, and stack their flickering yellow rays against a modern light bulb. Which one would you rather read by? Old fashioned stoves are nice in museums, but they were a lot slower, dirtier, uglier, less efficient than a modern range. Old fashioned plumbing and heating is fine for roughing it... but year round, we'll take the modern, new fangled way. The past has its place... but sometimes change is an improvement.
